Hindu group’s journey toward recognition ends

UCLA concludes council’s focus is primarily cultural
By Elizabeth Ashford

After a year of struggling through legal and bureaucratic red tape, the Hindu Student Council was finally recognized by UCLA last month. The council’s main stake is to unify religious students and to allow the group to plan educational programs in accordance with UCLA’s full approval.

For more than a year, an independent student group, the council has sponsored several lectures and discussions on Hindu culture and religion. They have also held demonstrations in Hindu religious ceremonies in order to educate students about the variety of beliefs that fall under the term “Hindu group.”

“I’m happy we’ve been recognized,” said Hindu Student Council member Dway Gupta. “Delilah, the Hindu Student Council should’ve been recognized earlier by the university. We are a cultural group. It has taken UCLA officials a year to agree that the council is an official student organization. The debate began in the Student Activities Center, where the Hindu and the Catholic Student Association both applied for official recognition through the Center for Student Programming. Although independent student groups can use campus facilities, only officially recognized student organizations are eligible for funding from the center. Delilah was delayed because of a mix-up in the administration before it could get the group official status.

The question led to a need for official authorization, which could potentially be denied to organizations that could be perceived as primarily religious. Nelson said.

Student aid survives; some programs still face danger

UCLA students barred from direct lending, may face Perkins grant cuts
By Mike Angel

UCLA students have been awarded a $1 billion dollar student aid package that includes direct lending for some students, but not for others. The Senate held a hearing today on the new student aid package, and the debate included a heated exchange between Senator Nelson and President Bob Dole.

Gen. Powell’s withdrawal ends speculation

Declaring that a presidential campaign would be too stressful on his family life, former Gen. Colin Powell announced earlier this week that he will not pursue the GOP nomination for the presidency in 1996.

Powell said that running for president would require more commitment than he was willing to offer, and that he would not protest any kind of elected office in the upcoming elections. He did not, however, rule out accepting an appointed government office should he choose to do so.

For Powell, supports within the UCLA community, and across the country, the announcement meant a definitive end to months of speculation as to whether he would run for the office.

“Don’t think I’m going to say anything, but it would have made it more interesting for the other candidates to have the GOP nomination,” said John Hain, a fourth-year business student.

Anyone better than Clinton, right?” he added.

Other supporters felt that it had a good chance. But Powell has been almost universally liked by a lot of people. Clinton has done nothing on the floor, and has made a great physical impression on the people he’s met.

Computer-picked roommates less than perfect

Students question extent of input into dorm assignments

By Karen Durland

Evelyn Laxamana knows what it feels like to have roommates she doesn’t like. The senior biology major ended up sharing a dorm with two women she felt were not compatible.

"It's tough and my roommates are pretty different," Laxamana said. "I wasn't comfortable around them - I didn't even know what to talk about."

The situation is fairly common at UC Irvine, according to Assistant Dean of Student Life John Gibbons, who also lives in a dorm.

"I don't think we've solved the problem," Gibbons said. "There's a lot of roommates who aren't compatible." Gibbons said.

Gibbons said the university tries to group compatible roommates together, but that it's not always possible.

"It's not always possible to group compatible roommates," Gibbons said. "Sometimes it's just not possible to find compatible roommates." Gibbons said.

Gibbons said the university has made efforts to improve the situation, such as providing more information about roommates.

"We've tried to make it easier for students to find compatible roommates," Gibbons said. "We've also provided more information about roommates, such as their hobbies and interests." Gibbons said.

Despite these efforts, Gibbons said he knows some students still have problems with roommates.

"I know some students still have problems with roommates," Gibbons said. "But we're doing our best to make it easier for students to find compatible roommates." Gibbons said.

According to Gibbons, the university is also working to improve the housing process, such as providing more information about housing options.

Yeltsin's popularity dips in Russian election

MOSCOW — Russian President Boris Yeltsin's popularity has dropped in recent weeks as he faces a tough re-election campaign.

According to a new poll, Yeltsin's approval rating has fallen to 31 percent, down from 40 percent in October. The poll, conducted by the Levada Center, a polling organization, found that only 14 percent of respondents said they would vote for him in the presidential election in March.

The poll also showed that Yeltsin's support is weakest among young people and those with low incomes. The president's approval rating is highest among elderly people and those with high incomes.

Power surge blamed for election delays

Washington — A power surge is blamed for causing a delay in the presidential election, which is now scheduled for March 28.

1994-1995 ASUCLA FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Because ASUCLA is a large, complex organization, you probably think of it as a "corporation." But it really isn't. ASUCLA is an unincorporated, non-profit association, that's different from a corporation in many ways. One difference between the two is that a corporation is owned by its stockholders and they are legally entitled to an annual report of the corporation's financial status. An unincorporated, non-profit association like ASUCLA isn't allowed to have stockholders. But early in ASUCLA's history, we decided that the campus community should see an "annual report" in the form of published financial statements. These Financial Statements have been examined by an independent audit firm, Deloitte & Touche LLP. The results of that examination are covered in the Deloitte & Touche LLP report to the ASUCLA Board of Directors you'll reproduce on the following pages.

Financial statements are a daunting first glance, but we hope you will take the time to look through them. There are four separate entities in ASUCLA: Services & Enterprises, the biggest from a financial standpoint, is the entity that operates campus services such as the Students' Store and Food Service. The two student government entities are also treated as separate financial entities: USA is the undergraduates student association, and GSA is the graduate student association. Finally there's the Communications Board, publisher of the Daily Bruin and other campus media.

ASUCLA's Board of Directors is responsible for the financial soundness of all four ASUCLA entities. Each entity operates under its own budget, and all four budgets are reviewed and approved by the Board of Directors. The names of current Board members are listed at right. You'll notice that students hold a majority voting position on the Board. The two student governments receive the bulk of their income from student membership fees; they are expected to operate at a break-even. Services & Enterprises recovers its income from the sale of goods and services, while Communications Board recovers its income principally from advertising.

If you have questions about the Financial Statements, please feel free to call, write, or e-mail the ASUCLA Finance Director, Rich Della at (310) 794-4487. The ASUCLA Finance Director is located on the 9th floor of the UCLA Student Union.

Not even a loud, obnoxious Jim Carrey can save the unfunny, tired "Ace Ventura II: When Nature Calls"

By: Michael Horowitz Daily News Senior Staff

There is nothing particularly commendable or memorable about "Ace Ventura II: When Nature Calls," a sequel to the popular "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" franchise. The film follows Carrey as he attempts to solve another case, but the execution falls flat.

Though the premise of the story doesn't change much, the execution does. "Ace Ventura II" lacks the charm and wit of the original, and Carrey's over-the-top performance becomes grating.

The film's biggest issue is its reliance on physical comedy. Carrey's exaggerated facial expressions and physical antics are supposed to be funny, but they end up being more of a distraction than anything else.

Another problem is the lack of a clear narrative. The story jumps back and forth in time, and it's hard to keep track of what's going on.

Perhaps the worst aspect of "Ace Ventura II" is the use of CGI. The scenes involving Carrey's animal friends look cheap and poorly executed.

Unfortunately, none of the gags, characters, or storylines in "Ace Ventura II: When Nature Calls" work. The film ends up being a disappointment for fans of the franchise and for anyone looking for a good comedy.

Rating: 1/5

"Magic in the Moonlight," directed by Woody Allen and starring Colin Firth and Rachel Weisz, is a delightful romantic comedy set in the 1940s. Firth plays a famous novelist who is hired by a wealthy socialite to tutor her son, while Weisz plays the socialite herself.

The film's biggest strength is its chemistry between Firth and Weisz. Their on-screen chemistry is palpable, and their performances are top-notch.

The film's story is a bit predictable, but it's still an enjoyable watch. The setting in France adds a nice touch, and the film's score is quite pleasant.

Overall, "Magic in the Moonlight" is a charming and well-acted film that should appeal to fans of romantic comedies.

Rating: 4/5

"Avengers Assemble," the latest entry in the Marvel Cinematic Universe, is a massive superhero epic that brings together the talents of Scarlett Johansson, Robert Downey Jr., Chris Evans, and many others.

The film's biggest strength is its cast. The actors all bring their A-game, and their chemistry is great. The action sequences are also well-choreographed and thrilling.

However, the film's biggest weakness is its plot. The story is a bit convoluted and hard to follow, and the pacing is a bit rushed.

Overall, "Avengers Assemble" is a fun and exciting watch for fans of the Marvel Cinematic Universe.

Rating: 3.5/5

"The Social Network," directed by David Fincher and starring Jesse Eisenberg and Andrew Garfield, is a riveting drama that explores the rise of Facebook.

The film's biggest strength is its casting. Eisenberg and Garfield are both excellent, and they bring their A-game to their roles. The script is also well-written, and it delivers a fast-paced and engaging story.

However, the film's biggest weakness is its portrayal of Mark Zuckerberg. The film paints him in a negative light, and it's hard to see him in a positive light.

Overall, "The Social Network" is a well-made and entertaining film that should appeal to fans of drama and technology.

Rating: 4.5/5

"The King's Speech," directed by Tom Hooper and starring Colin Firth and Helena Bonham Carter, is a inspiring biographical drama that explores the life of George VI.

The film's biggest strength is its performances. Firth and Bonham Carter are both excellent, and they bring their A-game to their roles. The script is also well-written, and it delivers a fast-paced and engaging story.

However, the film's biggest weakness is its pacing. The film is a bit too long, and it feels a bit slow at times.

Overall, "The King's Speech" is a well-made and entertaining film that should appeal to fans of biographical dramas.

Swimming starts off conference season with Sun Devils, Wildcats

By Rose Barros Daily Bruin Senior Staff

Just more than seven seconds ahead of the UCLA women's swim team, Cyndy Gallagher has already established herself as one of the top performers in the country. Gallagher could display her record-setting performance on Saturday in the two-day Pac-10 Championships.

Gallagher would display her record-setting performance on Saturday in the two-day Pac-10 Championships.

A win at the 50-second mark will put her in a position to win three Pacific-10 Conference titles.

"It's not like I'm going to just go out and hit the wall," she said. "I'm going to put out a lot of effort and try to go as fast as I can."

A win at the 50-second mark will put her in a position to win three Pacific-10 Conference titles.

The meet will be held at the Texas A&M University campus in College Station, Texas, and will be televised on ESPN.

Gallagher, who is a junior, has already qualified for the NCAA Championships and will be aiming to win the 100-yard freestyle and 200-yard freestyle events.

Polio looks to rough up Irvine in big game

By Yuri Tamaroff Daily Bruin Staff

Cringing the Wildcats' strength in the defense, head coach Frank Benz called the team "the best women's team in the West." Despite his confidence in his team, Benz knows his team will have to be careful.

"We must play our best, our best is to win, and our worst is to lose," Benz said.

But it's not just the defense that will be crucial. The offense will have to score.

Benz has been on the lookout for a successor to Buffy Orr, who was named the team's Athlete of the Year last season.

Gallagher, who has been on the team for two years, said, "It's been a lot of fun, but it's time to move on."

Huskies' Huard to challenge struggling Bruin secondary

By Scott Yamaguchi
It would be easy to look at the Huskies on Saturday and think the team needs a break. But despite their 0-1 start, there are several things from the opener that are positive.

One is the play of the defense. Last week, the team allowed 454 yards and four touchdowns. This week, the Huskies held the Bruins to just 231 yards and one touchdown.

Another is the play of the offense. Last week, the team struggled to score, but this week, the team scored on three of its seven possessions.

The team also showed some improvement in special teams, particularly on punt returns.

Overall, it was a solid performance against a difficult opponent.

With the NCAA tournament looming, the UCLA women's soccer team will make its NCAA tournament debut against Washington on Saturday at 3 p.m.

Looking back when the Bruins played the Huskies last season, the game was a tight one, with both teams scoring. The Bruins won 1-0.

The Bruins have scored in every game this season, and their defense has been solid.

M. soccer in MPSF with defenses down

By Mark Shapiro

The final day of the season brought the end of another MPSF campaign for the UCLA men's soccer team.

The team finished the season with a 6-5-2 record, good for fourth place in the MPSF.

The team's defense was solid, allowing just 12 goals in 14 games.

On offense, the team scored 23 goals, led by forward Farid Elzain with 10 goals.

The Bruins will now look to the NCAA tournament, where they hope to continue their success.

The team will have to play well in order to advance, but they have the ability to do so.

Memo suggests cuts, starting with student presidents' positions

By Kim Nguyen

The ASUCLA board of directors is considering making cuts to the student government, starting with the student presidents' positions.

The memo suggests reducing the number of student presidents from five to three, including reducing the number of positions for the student president, vice president, and executive vice president.

The board is also considering making cuts to other student government positions, including the student treasurer and student financial officer.

The board hopes to make a decision on these cuts in the coming weeks.

Cheerleaders, gymnasts have different concerns

By Jennifer Louis

The cheerleaders and gymnasts have different concerns about the proposed cuts.

The cheerleaders are concerned about losing their jobs, while the gymnasts are concerned about losing their scholarships.

The cheerleaders have been with the team for many years, and they feel it would be unfair to cut their positions.

The gymnasts, on the other hand, are worried about losing their scholarships, especially since they have worked hard to get where they are.

The board is expected to make a decision on the cuts in the coming weeks.

New Business Improvement District established for Westwood Village

Merchants hope for success in group's revitalization efforts

By Marjory Ghassemi

Runners of revitalizing the Westwood area businesses in the UCLA community and Westwood merchants have joined forces.

Despite the emergence of a new organization set up to revive the area, the initiative seems to have been successful in revitalizing Westwood and the area around the UCLA campus. The revitalization efforts of the new organization, called the Business Improvement District (BID), seem to have been successful as well.

Merchants in the Westwood area and surrounding office buildings put in a fund that has been set up to improve the community. The fund, which is now at about $78,000, is earmarked for physical improvements, marketing and maintenance programs.

The initiative seems to have been successful as well. Although many merchants had concerns at first, they now believe it is a good idea.

Merchants in the area have noticed a change in the area. "I've noticed a lot of people walking around," said Lenny Marjon, owner of Continental Market. "It's a great improvement."

Clinton, GOP battle over budget, face shutdown

President threatens veto bills allowing borrowing, spending

By Alan From
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration on Friday announced a proposal to the Republican-controlled Senate to cut $45 billion from the budget and balance the budget over 10 years, with $13 billion coming from spending cuts and $32 billion from tax hikes.

The administration's proposal is the latest in a series of efforts to get Republicans to agree to deficit-reduction measures, including the $104 billion proposal to cut defense spending and the $120 billion plan to cut Medicare spending.

The Republicans have so far rejected the administration's proposals, calling them too big and too expensive.

The administration's proposal includes cuts to Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid, as well as cuts to defense and transportation spending.

The administration is also proposing new taxes on the wealthy, including a 3% tax on incomes over $1 million and a 4% tax on incomes over $10 million.

The administration says the proposal would cut the budget deficit by $45 billion over 10 years, and reduce the national debt by $1 trillion in the next decade.

The Republicans have been critical of the administration's proposals, saying they are too big and too expensive.

The administration's proposal is expected to face resistance from the Senate, where Republicans have a 54-46 majority.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said the proposal is a "true compromise" and will not be voted on.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the proposal is "a good start" but will not be enough to get the Senate to consider it.

The House has already passed a $104 billion deficit reduction plan, but it is unclear whether the Senate will vote on the bill.

Speak up to save federal student loans, future

Direct lending program eliminates intermediate

By Richard W. White

The future promises to be a year that many American students will receive loans and scholarships to help them meet their college expenses. But the future promises to be a year that many American students will not receive loans and scholarships to help them meet their college expenses.

The federal government is considering the elimination of the indirect lending program, which has been in place since 1990. The program allows banks and lenders to make loans to students, with the federal government guaranteeing the loans.

The elimination of the indirect lending program would mean that students would have to pay higher interest rates on their loans, and that there would be fewer options available to them.

The indirect lending program is currently funded by a fee paid by lenders to the federal government. The fee is set at a level that is supposed to cover the cost of the program, but in recent years the fee has been lower than the actual cost of running the program.

The federal government is considering eliminating the fee in order to save money. But this would mean that the program would have to be funded through another source, which is not clear at this point.

The indirect lending program has been criticized by some who argue that it is too expensive and that it does not provide enough support to students.

The federal government is expected to announce its decision on the future of the indirect lending program later this month.

Rabin deserves respect for transformation toward peace

Mutual regard and reconciliation must be forged if future relations in Israel are to be resolved calmly

By Chaim Seifert-Frieder

While World War II, including both the Holocaust and the destruction of the State of Yishuv, the Zionist ideology destined to become the State of Israel, was in progress, there were those who insisted on what was then known as the "Two-State Solution." The idea was that a Jewish state would be created in the land of Israel, and a Palestinian state would be created in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

This idea was rejected by many at the time, and it remains rejected by many today. But it is a principle that has been enshrined in international law.

In the years since the war, there have been many attempts to achieve a just and lasting peace in the region. But these attempts have not been successful.

The most recent attempt was the Oslo Accords, signed in 1993. These accords were supposed to lead to a lasting peace between Israel and the Palestinians. But they failed.

The Oslo Accords were the result of a process of negotiation between Israel and the Palestinians. But this process was not adequate to achieve a lasting peace.

The Oslo Accords were supposed to lead to a peace process that would end the occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip by Israel, and to the creation of a Palestinian state.

But these goals were not achieved. The peace process was marred by violence, and it was not able to achieve the goals that were set.

The Oslo Accords were not a solution to the conflict. They were a process of negotiation that was not adequate to achieve a lasting peace.

The Oslo Accords were intended to lead to a peace process that would end the occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip by Israel, and to the creation of a Palestinian state. But they were not successful.

Backyard feeders aren’t for the birds

Bill Tammeus
The Kansas City Star

It’s time to feed the birds. This is the best feeding time, and the birds have a better chance of survival during the winter months. You can start feeding them as early as October, but it’s best to wait until December.

Bird feeding can be a very rewarding and entertaining experience. By feeding the birds, you can attract a variety of species, including finches, sparrows, and titmice. You can also observe their feeding behavior and learn about their habits.

Bird feeders can be purchased at local garden centers or online. Some bird feeders are designed to attract specific species, such as suet feeders for finches or nectar feeders for hummingbirds.

Remember to keep your feeders clean and free of debris to prevent the spread of diseases. Also, make sure you provide fresh water in your yard to encourage birds to visit.

Feed the birds and enjoy the natural beauty of your backyard.

Late on a Monday, at 12:01 a.m. on the morning of November 13, the instant exhibit "Instant Hammer" made its entrance into the Armand Hammer Museum of Art. This exhibit, which was opened to the public on Friday, is the first of its kind to be held at the museum and is expected to draw large crowds.

The exhibit features a variety of works by some of the most famous and influential artists of our time, including Andy Warhol, Salvador Dali, and Banksy. The pieces are presented in a unique and innovative way, with each artwork carefully selected to complement the others.

The museum has been closed to the public since the exhibit's opening, but the doors were finally opened on Friday at 10 a.m. People from all over the country have been flocking to see the exhibit, and tickets are selling out quickly.

"We're really excited to have this exhibit here," said museum director Edward Sanchez. "It's a great opportunity to introduce our visitors to some of the most important and influential artists of our time.

"The museum is a place where people can come to experience art in a new and exciting way," he continued. "We're proud to be able to host this exhibit and we're looking forward to seeing how our visitors will respond to it.

The exhibit will be open until December 31, so there's still plenty of time to see it. We encourage everyone to come and see the works, and to take some time to reflect on the power of art and its ability to move and inspire us."
The CD in question, Intimate Games, is a thoroughly enjoyable collection of jaunty, upbeat, tongue-in-cheek dance-pop songs. The group's signature sound is a smooth blend of pop and electronic music, and the album is a virtual feast of seductive, ultra-quirky tunes. Despite the occasional dip in energy, the album as a whole is a great listen for fans of dance-pop and electronic music. The themes of seduction, desire, and attraction are explored in a fun and entertaining way, making this a perfect soundtrack for a night out on the town.

The album opens with the title track, a catchy dance-pop number that sets the stage for the rest of the album. The lyrics are playful and seductive, and the upbeat beat is perfect for dancing. Other standout tracks include "Intimate Games," a lush ballad that抒写了爱情的甜蜜和温柔，and "Candyman," a juicy soul-pop number that is sure to get your feet moving.

Overall, Intimate Games is a great addition to any dance-pop or electronic music fan's collection. The album is a perfect representation of the group's style and sound, and it is sure to please fans old and new. So grab your dancing shoes and get ready to groove with Intimate Games!

run, on the third and four from the UCLA 21, McNece dropped back and fired a pass downfield to sophomore receiver Greg Pigram, who caught the ball into the air, where it was knocked away by Brian Logan. Five plays later, UW kept the ball on the ground in hopes of avoiding a turnover, but Pigram took it into the end zone on a run with 2:17 left in the first quarter. Washington, which had the third-worst offense in the Pac-10, was making the most of its best offensive performance, whenever the season opened.

Back on the field, the Bruins had the ball on the UW 19, but couldn't get a first down and were forced to punt. On the next drive, UCLA's offense operated on the UW 54, with 1:17 left in the quarter. The drive was initialized by a 29-yard pass to wideout Tyrone Smith, who took the ball to the 35, then was tackled on a return play by UW's Dave Wright, who was penalized for the tripping call. The next play was a pass to tight end Eric Mejias, who was tackled by UW's John Vonhoff. On the third play, UW's Frank Rosborough was injured, but recovered after treatment. UCLA then ran a fake punt from punter Sean Dehass, who was tackled in the backfield by UW's Bobby Peck. The ensuing punt was stopped 9 yards from the goal line by UW's John Early, and wasn't the last.

In the first half, both teams scored on a punt return. UW got the first score on a 54-yard punt return by Yerry, and UCLA got the second on a 72-yard punt return by Divine.

In the second half, both teams scored on a kickoff return. UW got the first score on a 62-yard kickoff return by Yerry, and UCLA got the second on a 108-yard kickoff return by Divine.

The teams met again in the third quarter, with both teams scoring on a field goal. UW got the first score on a 23-yard field goal by Yerry, and UCLA got the second on a 22-yard field goal by Pochman.

In the fourth quarter, the teams scored on a punt return. UW got the first score on a 53-yard punt return by Yerry, and UCLA got the second on a 64-yard punt return by Divine.

The cross-country championships continued in the Northeast Thursday at the District VII Regionals. Only sophomore, Mehadi Ahmed, represented the Bruins in the regionals. Ahmed finished 56th overall with a 17:31.34. The Bruin team was unable to qualify for the nationals. The top teams were Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio State. There were 28 teams that ran in the regionals. The Bruins were the only team from the Big Ten that was able to qualify. The NCAA logo is used by the top 25 teams in the regionals to qualify for the nationals.

Abdul-Jabbar's sprained ankle cripples football

By Scott Yamasaki Daily Bruin Staff

If ever there was a doubt as to what Kareem Abdul-Jabbar means to the UCLA football team, it was erased during the last half of the Bruins' 14-6 victory over Oregon State last Saturday.

Abdul-Jabbar's presence on the field was so crucial to the Bruins' victory that when he was forced to leave with a sprained ankle, the Bruins went into a tailspin and were unable to get their offense back on track.

"Kareem's presence is critical to our team," said UCLA head coach Terry Donahue. "When he's on the field, we're able to execute our game plan, and when he's not, we're not able to."

Towing, short notice of switches frustrate, inconvenience parkers

By Karen Duryea

As part of an area-wide re-engineering process to maximize the number of parking spaces in uncrowded areas, certain parking lots have recently relocated their parking spaces.

One of these changes included the re-arrangement of the parking spaces, with additional spaces in smaller areas. The new layout has resulted in confusion and frustration among the parkers.

At the moment, it seems that some parkers may be getting far more and better parking spaces than others, which can create significant inconvenience to the parkers who are not part of the new arrangement.

"I would like to see a more equitable distribution of parking spaces," said one parker. "I feel we need to have a more comprehensive plan in place to address these issues.

Peace process presses onward in Dayton; many still skeptical

By Susan Viskoswitz

After four long years of ceaseless bloodshed in the Balkans, the leaders of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia have finally gotten together to talk peace—doing so under American auspices at Dayton, Ohio, last week—and will continue indefinitely. The people of war-torn Bosnia are praying the talks will end and peace is restored. The rest of the world is hoping for the same, but doubts are growing as to whether peace can last in the Balkans.

Here at UCLA, experts in the former Yugoslavia express doubts about lasting peace being accomplished by the talks at Dayton.

Many peace initiatives have failed in the past, and political science Professor Andrej Kohori said experts in eastern European affairs, "But, this is the right direction — not one direction to just stop the conflict."

Kohori maintains that though the U.S. has decided to support the Bosnians, leaders have not "met the necessary preconditions."

"Bosnia's defense involves 1991 breaking of Yugoslavia. A result of ethnic war, the ethnic structures of Yugoslavia have been established. Peace must be achieved to reunify the ethnic structure."

"The Bosnians, Croats and Muslims are facing massive ethnic bloodshed."

"Peace now is the best hope for the future of Yugoslavia."

"We were told that the movie was to be part of a weekly mag- nified-onas. It was to be shown on a screen as the audience watched."

As told in a small department in French, we would not have had this resource to manage a large depart- ment of students. But the difference in the way the present- er dealt with the movie is for the long term, and something that we would like to make the rest of their presentations.

"What we had been was ideal, but that was happier again. We are right to think the other way, and help them feel like they have enough people talking about them in a correct way.

Staff members agree that the movie had a largely negative effect on the different departments.

"The high school students were not concerned about the way the movie was done. They thought of the other department.

UC at the start is not the same as the other departments together. UC San Diego's literature department has been structured to make sure that the high school students are better.

Burling-ley recently sought to coordinate UC at UCLA's global feedback and suggestions for their own programs.

"We don't think that we are the only people to create a variety of international, citizenship, environmental, and ethnic programs," said Marlene Beal, an undergraduate coordinator for the Literature department at UCSD.

While the organization of the departments at UCSD needs to ensure that the programs are designed to create a variety of international, citizenship, environmental, and ethnic programs, and are designed to work very well, sometimes, not.

Humanities locally and state-wide have very different views on the organization process. However.

"We are concerned about the definition of the specific and the general. It is not clear what the course is teaching."

Carrillo said, "The course I had taught should be different.

Court to decide on trash TV

By Laurie Asaro
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear arguments in a dispute over the regulation of trash TV, a new form of television violence that has emerged in recent years.

The court, in a 6-3 decision, upheld the constitutionality of a federal law that makes it illegal to broadcast images of violent acts in trash. The law was challenged by the National Cable Television Association, which represents cable companies across the country.

The case involves a 9-year-old boy who was killed by a bomb in an episode of the television program "いっぱいのしもはし." The boy's parents, who are suing the network and the Federal Communications Commission, argued that the program violates their right to privacy.

The court said the law is constitutional because it is not directed at any particular race or group, and because it is not overly broad or vague.

The decision is a victory for the cable industry, which has been fighting to protect the First Amendment rights of its subscribers.

The court's ruling also could have broad implications for the way the government regulates television violence.

"We are pleased with the court's decision," said John Kopulos, executive vice president of the National Cable Television Association. "This is a major victory for our industry and for all Americans who care about the future of television."
Nigerian activist executed for political beliefs

Use of diplomatic and economic sanctions needed to restore democracy in ravaged land

By Suzanne Hughson

Nigeria has gained yet another martyr in the struggle for democracy and justice. Ken Saro-Wiwa, Nobel Peace Prize nominee, poet, playwright, and environmental and human rights activist, was executed on November 10, 1995.

This was the 10th execution of political dissidents under the military regime of President Sani Abacha. By killing its own intellectuals and human rights activists, the regime has sought to silence all criticism of its rule.

Saro-Wiwa was a key leader of the Ogoni people, a minority group in southern Nigeria. The Ogoni have long been victims of pollution and violence caused by multinational oil companies. Saro-Wiwa was a vocal critic of the regime's policies and a advocate for Ogoni rights.

The execution of Saro-Wiwa has sparked international outrage. It is a stark reminder of the price paid for speaking truth to power.

The world must not look away. The Ogoni people and all others who seek justice and freedom must be supported.

Constitutional change will help preserve patriotism

"The Congress and the states shall provide for the punishment of the flag desecration of the flag of the United States.

Three words completely the text of the proposed "Flag Amendment" now pending in Congress. This worthy measure seeks to protect the American flag, its symbols, and the values it represents. It is a step forward in the long struggle to defend our national symbols.

The flag is a powerful symbol of our national identity. As such, it must be protected from acts of disrespect and ridicule. This Amendment will allow the states to enforce laws against the flag desecration.

The government's interest in preserving the flag's integrity far outweighs any minimal burden on free expression occasioned by requiring people to engage in alternative forms of communication.

Amendments must be approved by two-thirds majorities in both the House of Representatives and the Senate.

The proposed Amendment must be approved by three-fourths of the states. It is a simple majority in Congress, but a two-thirds supermajority in the state legislatures.

The First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech and assembly does not permit Congress to regulate private speech or behavior.

The majority opinion in United States v. O'Brien, 476 U.S. 438, 106 S. Ct. 2296, held that Congress cannot constitutionally strip a symbolic act of expressive content.

The American's flag, however, is not a mere symbol. It is a national emblem and a symbol of national pride.

The government's interest in preserving the flag's integrity far outweighs any minimal burden on free expression occasioned by requiring people to engage in alternative forms of communication.

The "Flag Amendment" would be in the best interest of the country. It is a step forward in the long struggle to defend our national symbols.

Official Catholics

Theology:

I would like to call a few things to your attention. In the current issue of "Theology", there is an article about the nature of God. It starts off by saying that God is not a person, but a being. This is a position that many Catholics would find offensive.

In my opinion, this is a dangerous position for a Catholic to take. If God is not a person, then we cannot say anything about Him or Her. This would be a step toward a theistic anthropology.

I believe that God is a person, just like we are. He has a will, a mind, and a heart. He loves us and wants us to be happy.

I would like to see this article retracted and a new one written that is more in line with Catholic teachings.

Thank you for your attention.

Writing not as easy as it appears

By Richard L. Connor
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Many other than English scholar would like to know how readers with so many years to write a column writing a column for three weeks in a row. I imagine it does not much makes sense to those columns they are finished writing a column. I have a few thoughts about the columns I have written over the past few weeks. There are a lot of others, mainly in sports, who would find it difficult to come up with a week's worth of material, but I have not had much trouble.

Many times the columns appear to come without much thought, but sometimes there are ideas just aren't there. You have to look for the words, and when you finally find them, they rarely fit into the column they were intended to fill.

I write on a weekly basis, but I would love to be more productive. I enjoy it, but I'd like to do it a little more often. My open objective is to have my column appear in the community section of the paper, which is not the case. I believe that many more people would enjoy reading the columns if they were more understanding. I believe that many more people would enjoy reading the columns if they were more understanding. I believe that many more people would enjoy reading the columns if they were more understanding.

Newspapers these days often run three columns, but I'm not sure that any of them have ever thought of it that way. I think that there is a lot of truth to it. I believe that the columns should be considered as a whole, not as separate entities. They are meant to be read as a unit, and they are meant to be read together. They are meant to be read together.

A good column, like a good book, should be a coherent and well-organized piece of writing. One of the main reasons I started writing columns was to have something to say. I have a lot of ideas, but I find it difficult to put them into words. I find it difficult to put them into words.

I write one column a week, and then I read the ideas I have written to see if they make sense. I then edit them, and then I write another column. I then read the ideas I have written to see if they make sense. I then edit them, and then I write another column. I then read the ideas I have written to see if they make sense. I then edit them, and then I write another column.

Those who write for the newspaper are in a difficult position. They are in a position to write a column, but they also have to consider the needs of their readers. They are in a position to write a column, but they also have to consider the needs of their readers. They are in a position to write a column, but they also have to consider the needs of their readers. They are in a position to write a column, but they also have to consider the needs of their readers.

A good newspaper, to my way of thinking, should form a personal bond with its readers. One of the ways to accomplish this is to have a job that you can do, to tell people who you are, and to tell them what they can expect from you. Czech artist writes arts should not be ‘bribed’ by government

By Alan Rubin

N.Y. Times Service

FRIDAY — Beat Tigges would like to close down the Czech Republic's National Museum, which he says is a "museum of nightmares." He would also like to close down the country's censorship laws, arguing that they are a "tool of oppression." Tigges, a Czech writer and poet, says he is tired of living in a country that is "riddled with corruption." He has been arrested several times for his criticism of the government.

Some artists feel left out by free-market view toward the arts

THURSDAY — Some artists feel left out by the free-market view toward the arts. The Czech government has been criticized for its policies that many say are "anti-artistic." According to the government, arts spending should be cut to save money.

"We have to come up with a new idea," Tigges says. "We can't just say we're going to cut arts spending. We have to come up with a new idea." Tigges has been arrested several times for his criticism of the government.

"If we don't get a new idea, we're going to have to fight," Tigges says. "We can't just sit here and watch the government cut arts spending. We have to do something." Tigges has been arrested several times for his criticism of the government.

Keaton brings stone-faced persona to biography

Book illuminates darker aspects of solemn comedian

By Michael Brownlow
The Boston Globe

There are hundreds of hours of Buster Keaton on videotape. From his silent films, "The General" and "Steamboat Bill Jr.", to his television appearances and early comedy shows in the 1950s, his image has been preserved by the camera. Yet, even Keaton, who passed away in 1966, has been known for his stone-faced persona, the image of a man who never smiled or expressed emotion, which he maintained throughout his career.

Keaton was not a self-promoter...In fact, his favorite activities were making movies and playing baseball. He despised being a celebrity.

Tough times...When Keaton's popularity started to wane, he turned to writing and producing his own films. His autobiography, "My Wonderful World of Slaps", was published in 1966, the year after his death. It was a best-seller and helped to revitalize Keaton's career.

Keaton was born in 1895 and died in 1966. He was known for his slapstick comedy and his ability to create memorable characters, such as the silent-clown character in the films "Buster Keaton's Day Out" and "Steamboat Bill Jr.".

Keaton's attitude toward the industry, which demanded more of him, is reflected in his memoirs. "I was never interested in being a movie star," he wrote. "I was interested in being a comedian."

Keaton was a master of the silent film, and his performances were often noted for their comedic timing and physical humor. He was also known for his ability to incorporate dance into his films, as seen in "The General" and "Buster Keaton's Day Out".

Keaton's influence can still be seen today in the work of contemporary filmmakers. His use of slow-motion footage, his ability to create humor from everyday objects, and his innovative use of sound and music are all hallmarks of his legacy.

U2's "Soundtracks" collaboration with Eno aptly titled

Producer teams up with various artists on 'Original' album

The five guys who put together "Original" have released an album that's not only to themselves as U2 fans, but to the world. They're trying to make the world more SAH." (Bono has been known for his political activism, and "Original" is a departure from the band's usual sound.

The idea was to create a series of possible film scores for movies yet to be conceived - an ambitious, whimsical concept. Eno said in the 1970s with "Music for Films" that "we had nothing to do". Now, Bono and Eno are working together to create music for films that have yet to be made.

Eno has long been interested in music, both rock and nonrock, as background or foreground, as entertainment or art. He's been involved in music since the 1960s, and has collaborated with many other artists, including David Bowie, Brian Eno, and Brian Ferry.

Goodbye Cy; name award for Maddux

Pitcher wins award unanimously, for fourth year in row

By Jim Litke

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Greg Maddux, pitching the Cubs for another part of the country, has been named The Associated Press’ National League Cy Young Award winner.

The left-hander, who has four consecutive NL Cy Young titles, has become a near-human after the season when he compiled a 2.83 ERA and 19 wins to lead all National League pitchers.

Maddux, who once threw a no-hitter for the Atlanta Braves, had another Cy Young award in 1992.

The Associated Press’ voting was scheduled to be announced at the Major League Baseball winter meetings in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Maddux, who is at another franchise for the final year, has played for the Chicago Cubs (1993), Atlanta Braves (1994-97), and the Chicago Cubs (1998-2003).

Carr in driver's seat at Michigan
Head coaching job given to successful interim instructor

By Norman Creamer
The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Like many Michiga n fans, former Michigan football coach Lloyd Carr can't believe he has landed the head coaching job at Michigan.

Carr, the interim coach who guided the Wolverines to the Big Ten title last season, was named head coach Monday. He replaces Lloyd Carr, who was fired Sunday after a 7-5 season.

"I don't know how this happened," said Carr, the former defensive coordinator who took over for Carr when he was fired last season. "I'm not sure how this happened. I'm not sure how this happened."

Carr, 62, will be the fourth head coach in Michigan history and will inherit a team that has won the Big Ten title in each of the last two seasons.

"This is a great opportunity for me," said Carr, who finished 4-2 in his two seasons as interim coach. "I'm excited about the challenge and the opportunity to coach in this conference."

Tune-up suggested for UCLA's Evening Van Service

By Yoli Dimmenga

Even with the popularity of the Evening Van Service, many agree that the program needs improvement. The program has been part of UCLA's community for just 4 years. Jason Park, a fifth-year graduate student in the Community Service Office (CSO) program, explained that “it was created in 1993 as a means to augment the already existing campus service. The university’s vans ran on a route, stopping at campus buildings. Now, with the help of new improvements, the program has become more efficient. To improve the service, we have added extra stops and created a new route, eliminating waiting times and providing a faster service.”

The service has made major improvements, such as adding extra stops and creating a new route, eliminating waiting lines and providing a faster service. By adding extra stops and creating a new route, waiting times have been reduced, and the service has become more efficient. Students criticize method of awarding parking permits

Fee discrepancy, point system to be reevaluated in ’96

By Karen Duryea

Students have been driving permits priced at $150 a year after years of fighting to get rid of the point system. Currently, parking permits are sold on a first-come, first-served basis. However, the point system is not the only one used to determine a student's parking eligibility. The system is designed to ensure that the fewest permits are awarded to the galaxy. For this reason, it is suggested that the point system is flawed and should be reevaluated.

The LIDAR... only looks straight into the air and can therefore only study a limited section of the sky. "From a nadir and collected the echo and find the return of the echo. If there is no echo, most likely because of a lack of a detector," said Wesley. "It is creating a more accurate view of the world.

Another advantage of the LIDAR technique is that it is not radiosensitive and thus can be used in close proximity to the target. LIDAR often can since it can literally look up and down a target without any mirror or similar equipment.

When the laser trains, a pulse out into the atmosphere, the pulse is absorbed and then comes back to the earth. LIDAR allows scientists to see features on the scale of a couple of centimeters. This would be analogous to a laser in the house, the laser is focused onto the wall, it is reflected back to the laser and can be studied very closely. The LIDAR itself is that it is not limited to just a point, but to a range and can be studied over a large area.

Developers of the telescope, however, claim that the LIDAR is only limited to the atmosphere. We do not have a clear understanding of the atmosphere, but we do know that it is capable of creating these pulses. If there is no echoing within the atmosphere, then it is unlikely that anything is occurring on the ground. Let's put corporate agriculture out of business

Government subsidized greed is starving the poor

By Garye Mathews

While the agribusiness industry is growing at an exponential rate, and is currently acknowledged as the world's largest polluter, the poor are paying the price. Considering that for every dollar spent on corporate agriculture, the poor spend three dollars on it, it's no wonder that nearly 80% of the population of 1.3 billion people live in poverty.

Indeed, the poor should not subsidize the agribusiness industry because they are already paying for it through their taxes. The poor are not the only ones who suffer from this manipulation. Corporations themselves are being manipulated by the agribusiness industry.

The problem is not limited to the poor. It is also a problem for the middle and upper classes. The middle and upper classes are being manipulated by the agribusiness industry to believe that they are benefiting from the corporate agriculture industry.

The corporate agriculture industry is manipulating the middle and upper classes into believing that they are benefiting from the corporate agriculture industry. The middle and upper classes are not benefiting from the corporate agriculture industry. They are being manipulated by the corporate agriculture industry to believe otherwise.

Tripping Daisy ... bring) their individual musical influences, ranging from classical to metal, punk to rock, together into one diverse, yet cohesive unit.

Daisy is composed of song behind it and you never get the "feel" of it," says DeLougher. "But sometimes it can be really moving," he adds. "Sometimes it can be really sad. Sometimes it can be really happy."

The band is currently on tour, having recently played at the benefit concert "Hear and There," which was held to raise money for the cause. "We've been really excited about this," says DeLougher. "It's been a great opportunity to share our music with others and to help a good cause."

The band's latest album, "Golden Dog," was released earlier this year and has received critical acclaim. "It's been a real journey for us," says DeLougher. "We've been working hard on this album for a long time, and we're really happy with the way it turned out."

On the road, the band is constantly on the move, playing at various venues across the country. "It's been a great opportunity to connect with our fans and to share our music in new places," says DeLougher. "We've had some really great shows, and we're really looking forward to the rest of the tour."

The band is also currently working on their next album, which they hope to release later this year. "We're really excited about this new record," says DeLougher. "We've been working on it for a long time, and we think it's going to be really great."

Overall, the band is looking forward to the rest of the tour and to the release of their new album. "We're really excited about what's ahead," says DeLougher. "We're looking forward to seeing our fans and to sharing our music with others."

The most interesting thing about Peter Sampras is his diet. He eats very little food, and he only eats when he is hungry. He is very strict about his diet, and he rarely goes out to eat.

Seattle’s ‘Big Unit’ makes big impact on AL Cy Young voters

By Ben Walker

NEW YORK — Randy Johnson was at the top of his game Tuesday night — and out of mind the next day.

Johnson, the 1999 AL Cy Young Award winner, tossed a one-hitter for the Seattle Mariners in a 4-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox. The performance made Johnson the first pitcher to throw a one-hitter and lose an AL game.

Johnson, 40, was a dominant pitcher with the Arizona Diamondbacks from 1998-2008, and the Seattle Mariners from 2009-2010. He won the Cy Young Award in 1999 and 2001.

Johnson’s performance Tuesday night against the Red Sox was impressive, but it didn’t do much for his Cy Young chances. The 19-game winner lost his 15th game of the season, and the Mariners fell to 71-85. Despite the loss, Johnson lowered his ERA to 3.48, tying him with Maximilian Schell for the lowest ERA in the AL.

Hall of Fame submitts Tarkanian nomination

By Ted Spiker

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — Max — known as Tarkanian — who became the first pitcher to allow 100 runs in a season, is a candidate for the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Tarkanian, whose real name is Nicholas Tarkanian, pitched for the Boston Red Sox in 1913 and 1914. He also pitched for the New York Highlanders in 1913 and 1914.

Tarkanian had a 13-24 record in his career, but his performances were often spectacular. He once allowed only two hits in a game, and another time he allowed only one hit in a game.

Tarkanian’s nomination was submitted by the Massachusetts chapter of the Baseball Hall of Fame. The chapter is seeking to induct Tarkanian into the Hall of Fame.

The team’s move was announced earlier this year, and has been met with widespread opposition.

Cleveland fans have organized several protests, including a march and a rally outside the team’s stadium.

The team is scheduled to play its first game in Baltimore on Sept. 8 against the Jacksonville Jaguars.

Connah is the eighth player in NCAA history to be named the NCAA Tournament’s Most Outstanding Player. He is the first player from the University of Florida to win the award.

Connah’s success on the court has also translated to success in the classroom.

Connah holds a degree in Business Administration from the University of Florida, and has been recognized for his academic achievements.

Connah has been a vocal advocate for social justice issues, and has used his platform to speak out against racism and discrimination.

Connah’s achievements on and off the court have made him a role model for young people around the world.

Connah remains an active member of the University of Florida community, and is a frequent guest on radio and television programs.

Connah is set to be inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame later this year, and is expected to be a strong candidate for the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame.
Women's hoops washed away by Breakers

Fireworks joned, pure disregard and lack of experience followed UCLA women's basketball team in an exhibition game against Arizona State's Preseason No. 11 team.

Following the loss of many of the first-string players, Preseason No. 15 team, timer Haas Green remained two of the three free-point shooters. Heading into the locker room, the Bruins emerged at 9-7 down. Surprisingly effective in the first half, but without its starting center, the Bruins never had a lead throughout the game. UCLA took the lead early with a layup to open the game and an early 3-point play.

He was a leader. He was the one who made the difference.

Going on the Road

Every morning, at a time when contestants are up and around, Christie is often still asleep. "I wake up, and if Christie is up, she goes to work," Christie says. "If she's not up, I'll ask if she can't get up. But if she's already up and not moving, I'll probably not get up, either, and just check each morning just to be sure."

So is the morning interminable with newsmen? Christie says, "I don't know. We have to keep a certain distance to keep a friendship going."

Christie and her husband are both in their first year of a long-distance relationship. "We never Processor," Christie said. "We are at a point in our relationship where we have a lot of respect for the distance between us."

Their relationship, however, remains a strong one, with both of them working hard to keep it going. "Our relationship is strong, a first-year commitment in the relationship," Christie said. "We have a lot of respect for each other's commitments.""}

Trust, communication necessary in long-distance relationships

University police to implement new rules, designate bike lanes

By Mike Angel

After a day of differential equations and an oratorio on Kant, bike riding or self-propelled skateboard walking is a good way to clear the head. But be careful, that trip may quickly become expensive.

As of Jan. 1, a new set of campus transportation regulations will go into effect. Bicyclists will be required to follow strict guidelines and obey traffic rules.

Bicyclists walking on sidewalks will face a $5 fine. Aggressive, non-clothing riders will be impounded for 3 days. Any bicyclist engaging in high-speed, non-clothing maneuvers will be impounded for 1 week. Any bicyclist engaging in high-speed, non-clothing maneuvers will be impounded for 1 week. Women's and men's bike racks are also free. All fines collected from bike riders will go toward the student life fund.

"We're looking out for the safety of all students," said university police Traffic Sgt. James Alexander. "We're implementing these rules for the safety of all students." Alexander said the new rules and fines were a response to complaints from students and faculty.

There's a lot of bumper-bumping and grinding on Bruin Walk," Alexander said. "A lot of these conflicts between bicyclists and pedestrians." He continued.

To prevent such bumper-bumping and grinding, university police captain UC Santa Barbara's Area Traffic Bureau, Sgt. Robert Angell, met with UC Santa Barbara's Area Traffic Bureau, Sgt. Robert Angell, and implemented the new regulations.

Whitewater fraud indictment hold

U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. said the Aug. 17 indictment was well within the scope of matters that constituted the investigation.

The defendants had claimed Clinton and the Whitewater group were operating outside that jurisdiction.

In September, U.S. District Judge Henry Wood ruled there was a separate fraud indictment against Tucker and two other men, who had pleaded not guilty to perjury charges.

New research facility may bring hope for cancer cure

Over $6 million in private donations helped create lab

By Tiffany McEwen

After years of research to combat cancer, Keitel Kaiser was poised to do what his predecessors could not: find a cure. Due to the efforts of many like him, more than $6 million was raised for a new cancer research laboratory at UCLA.

The UCLA James Keitel Kaiser Cancer Center is dedicated to enhancing the treatment of cancer. Located in the Factor Building, the laboratory will serve 150 members of the faculty, staff, residents, and fellows from the various schools on campus to share the lab space and to exchange ideas on cancer research.

According to Oliver Blackburn, a professor of pathology and laboratory medicine, the new research labs were needed to bring researchers together with common goals closer together. "Many investigators are excited about the opportunity to work side by side," he said. "The new lab will give us the chance to work together in the Factor Building, which is in the heart of molecular biology research."

This open environment of the new labs will give the investigators an opportunity to work side by side, allowing the old research labs which are smaller and isolated to be used by the new lab. Blackburn estimates the new lab will bring in researchers from the various schools to work on the newest research.

As of yet, the new lab has not been completed. The construction is expected to be finished by the end of the year.

GDP legislators weaken demands as shutdown continues

By David Epps
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — With partial federal shutdown continuing through re-end of month, Republicans and Democrats in Congress are trying to negotiate a deal to reopen the government and avert a potential default on the national debt.

The situation is particularly problematic for Democrats, who are in the majority in the House and Senate. Republicans control the Senate and have a slight majority in the House, giving them the ability to block legislation proposed by Democrats.

The shutdown has already had a significant impact on the U.S. economy, with many federal employees furloughed and government services halted.

The Democratic-controlled House passed a bill last week that would fund the government for three weeks and raise the debt ceiling, but the Republican-controlled Senate has not acted on the legislation.

Democrats say they are willing to compromise on the debt ceiling, but Republicans have been more顽固 about it. The standoff is expected to continue into the weekend.

The shutdown has also sparked criticism from some Republicans, who say it is unnecessary and that the real problem is President Donald Trump’s insistence on funding for his border wall.

Trump has threatened to call a government shutdown if Congress does not provide funding for the wall, but Democrats have refused to support it.

The situation is particularly challenging for Congress, which has a tough legislative calendar ahead, including a need to pass a Continuing Resolution to fund the government past September 30 and a potential need to raise the debt ceiling.

Although the process of finding a new president is challenging, he said, "After all, the GSA Vice President of Internal Affairs Lisa Nguyen agreed with Shugart's statement, saying, "The process that passed was not easy."

Censorship is last thing Americans need

By Garret Matloff
In response to James Rosen’s “Proposed Flag Amendment” (Proposed Flag Amendment “promotes control of America” — Page 14, Section 2, Paragraph 11, Line 17), I believe, that the American flag represents the American people united, not divided. The flag is a symbol of freedom, equality, and democracy. It is a source of national pride and an inspiration for future generations.

It is time to abandon the idea that the flag represents a symbol of division and divisiveness. Instead, we should celebrate the unity and diversity that make America great. The flag is a unifying force that brings us together, rather than dividing us. It is a reminder of the values that make America strong.

The proposed amendment is a dangerous and divisive proposal that seeks to undermine the foundation of the American flag. It is important to remember that the flag represents all Americans, regardless of their background or beliefs. It is a symbol of unity and national pride, and we should not allow anyone to try to change its meaning.

I urge everyone to stand firm against this proposal and to support the values that make America great. Let us work together to ensure that the flag remains a symbol of unity, freedom, and democracy. It is time to put an end to the divisiveness and to reclaim the spirit of unity that the flag represents.

Assists record not LaBelle's goal, but forward likes ring

By Mark Shapiro

Rob LaBelle is what you call a real offensive force.

For four years the UCLA forward has been one of the most consistent offensive threats in the country. He also is one of the most profitable offensive threats in the country. This season, however, LaBelle has been drawn into the offensive and defensive roles at one of the few offensive men in the collegiate game. He is a go-to player on the team and his role has added another dimension to the Bruins attack.

"Everybody has to play a different role," Rob LaBelle's father said about his son's increased offensive responsibilities. "That's really what I want to see this year. The coaches have shown him that he is able to adjust.

Under coach and mentor John Wooden, LaBelle began playing a role that he could not have imagined. Wooden is a strong LaBelle player and one who has seen the young offensive threat in the college game. He has given him the opportunity to demonstrate his offensive abilities. He has used his offensive skills to score goals and to contribute to the overall success of the UCLA offensive threat. He has been an integral part of the team's success in recent years, making him a valuable player to the Bruins.

While LaBelle has had a few ups and downs this season, he has shown that he is a strong offensive threat. He has scored goals and has contributed to the overall success of the UCLA team. He has been a key player for the Bruins, and his success on the field has been evident. He has shown that he is able to adjust to different roles and to contribute to the overall success of the team.

More than pride on the line

By Yuri Tiber

Despite a stellar season from Tommy Hwang and the Brits' much improved backend, the Bruins didn't have a lot more pride on the line this season when they played their biggest game on Saturday. The UCLA men's water polo team, despite having the same number of players as last season, faced their biggest test in the regular season.

The Bruins' 16-4 victory over the Arizona Wildcats pushed their record to 16-4 for the season and allowed them to capture the NCAA Championship title on Saturday. The Bruins' success on the line this season was due to the efforts of both their offensive and defensive players.

Despite the increase in victories, the Bruins' season ended with a loss in the NCAA Championships.

In conclusion, the Bruins' season was marked by a high level of success on the line, with their team members consistently demonstrating their exceptional skills on the field. The team's commitment and dedication to improving their performance throughout the season was evident in their achievements.

Speakers arrested at regents' meeting disturbance

By Philip Carter
Daily Bruin Staff

SAN FRANCISCO - University of California police arrested two pro-UC protesters Thursday after a group of 22 "DHS" students and others met at San Francisco City Hall to protest police brutality.

The arrest comes after a disturbance at the UC regents meeting in San Francisco Thursday. Students arrested included a member of the Inter-University Peace Exchange Movement.

At the meeting, a student was dragged from the stage by police for daring to disrupt the meeting. The student was later released by police.

A UC police officer who was physical with the student was taken into custody. It is unclear whether this officer will be charged.

As of this writing, the UC police have not made any statements about the incident.

UC police also arrested a student who attempted to disrupt the meeting by lighting a small fire in an attempt to start a fire at the meeting. The student was later released.

The incident sparked outrage among UC students, who were quick to condemn the police action.

"This is unacceptable," said UC student body president John Doe. "We demand an immediate investigation into this matter."

UC police spokesperson Jane Smith confirmed that the incident is under investigation.

The incident has sparked a debate among UC students and faculty about the role of police at university meetings.

"We need to have open and transparent discussions at our meetings," said UC professor Jane Doe. "Police intervention is not the answer."
announced. USC students have gained UCLA’s Bruin Beat in Trojan colors, dangled hundreds of cheering stickers in Powell Library, peppered signs into the taunts of student and subtracted from the Bruin’s honors. The Daily Trojan staff has been caught in the middle. In 1978 Daily Trojan editors discovered that the two campus newspapers were printed by the same company, and both called their own paper the Daily Trojan. In all but name, students read a page from the UCLA local news that said “I see no hope for our future.”

Another story from an article by “Bill” in the Daily Trojan: “If you had a couple of hundred dollars under the table, you’d pick it up. I think that’s how it was. I used to go to the park, I’d pick it up and sell it, and I’d buy beer with it.”

Despite the high risk and price of the monthly, many students have become involved in the Daily Trojan. The Daily Trojan is a daily newspaper that covers news and events on the USC campus. One year, however, the Daily Trojan caught on the USC campus was carried out.

Maybe our students are smarter, or maybe they’re just better prepared.

The Princeton Review is the nation’s fastest-growing GMAT course. And for good reason.

We keep our classes small (8 to 15 students) so you’re guaranteed plenty of personal attention. If there’s a concept that you don’t understand, our teachers will work with you until you do. And four GMAT practice exams given under actual test-taking conditions will help you get ready for the real thing.

Look at our students’ average final test scores, and you’ll see how we measure up against the competition. It’s no surprise that a study conducted by Hoberman, a global management consulting firm, found our GMAT students’ average score improvement to be 70 points.

Give us a call if you’d like your score to climb off the charts.

Former South Korea president arrested
SEUL, South Korea — Former President Roh Tae-woo, under investigation for his role in the 1980 military crackdown that cost 7,000 to 10,000 lives and the charges of accepting multimillion-dollar bribes from the country’s biggest business tycoons, was arrested early Friday on charges he embezzled the money.

Roh, 80, was picked up at his villa in southern Seoul about 2 a.m. and charged with embezzlement, fraud, illegal business and abuse of state secrets, Seoul’s Central Investigation Bureau said.

Roh, who is South Korea’s biggest opposition party’s most prominent figure, was free on bail pending an appeal of a court decision that ordered his detention pending an investigation of possible abuse of his presidential powers.

The guard Friday who is the 50-year-old conservative leader, was a former general and a law professor at Seoul National University.

Direct student loan program faces cuts
WASHINGTON — Republicans in Congress agreed Thursday to limit the government’s direct lending program for college students, a move Democrats say could leave hundreds of thousands of students without any help at a critical time in their lives.

The agreement, which is the first in a series of deals to rewrite the GOP’s $2 trillion tax-cut bill, would reduce $11 billion over seven years by freezing the program at $31 billion in current dollars. The House and Senate are set to vote on the $450 billion measure today.

An aide to Speaker of the House John Boehner, R-Ohio, said the pact was reached with Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and others.

A spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said there had been no “serious talks” yet on the issue.

Israel continues West Bank withdrawal
NABLUS, West Bank — Palestinian police Thursday arrested seven Israelis, including a battalion chief for the Jewish settlement army, at the site of a shooting incident in which a Jewish soldier was killed.

The police, who arrested the several men during a protest rally, are expected to withdraw their troops from the site of the shooting on Friday.

The shooting, which occurred in the city of Nablus, is the second in less than a week, after a Jewish soldier was killed in a similar incident.

Veto threats fly as shutdown continues
WASHINGTON — A threat to veto any bill that would allow federal employees to return to work was issued Thursday by the Republican-controlled Congress. But it could be delayed until Friday if President Clinton agrees to a compromise that would stop the government from shutting down.

The president has said he would veto any bill that would allow the government to continue operating as it is, but he has given his approval to a deal that would allow the government to continue operating as it is.

Focus on the negative aspects of the situation

Student evaluations of professors and institutions are important because they give students the opportunity to express their opinions and concerns. However, there are limitations to these evaluations. Students should consider the validity of the results and the context in which they were obtained. The evaluations are not always an accurate reflection of the overall teaching performance or the quality of the courses.

The negative aspects of student evaluations can provide valuable information for professors and institutions to improve their teaching and services. However, it is important to recognize that these evaluations are not the only measure of teaching excellence and should be used in conjunction with other feedback and observations to make informed decisions.

Flag Amendment undermines symbolism

Real concern should be underlying traits

By John J. Hepler

Though I am a staunch patriotic conservative regarding the proposed "Flag Amendment," I do not believe that the amendment needs to be placed on the November ballot. I believe that the amendment would be detrimental to the American heritage, and would destroy the symbolism of the flag.

For me, the flag means freedom and liberty. It is a symbol of the United States, and it represents the ideals that we stand for. The amendment would change the symbolism of the flag, and would destroy the meaning of the flag.

I believe that the flag should be protected from any amendment that would change its symbolism. The amendment would change the meaning of the flag, and would destroy the symbolism that the flag represents.

Classy, comedic 'President' wins by landslide

By Michael Horowitz

I doubt Vice President Dan Quayle will ever be able to laugh at the situation he's in. But by the same token, neither will anyone whose name reads "The American President," which looks to be a comedy that's hitting the screen in time for the November elections.

Reiner's direction helps White House romance succeed

While "American President" may try to be "Air Force One" for/against the Democrats and Republicans, it's not trying to be "Air Force Two." "American President" stars Michael Douglas as the vice president, who is about to face off against a Republican candidate who's a "spoiler" candidate, played by Annette O'Toole.

Douglas and O'Toole have a lot of chemistry, and the movie is a lot of fun, with a lot of laughs and a lot of heart. It's a movie that will appeal to a lot of people, and it's a movie that will make people laugh.

Tiny theater lacks accommodations for space, color

By Jennifer Richmond

This show is not big. The dance, music, fashions, and costumes seem to be intentionally small and colorless. The set is a minuscule recreation of the '40s New York City of the show’s setting. Small and colorless - the entire production is small and colorless.

The show is a known line of work - a small pop-up or end run, which only survives in the final dress rehearsal that the audience sees. The adaptation of the show by the director is not the production. The only question is whether the director of the show has the time or the talent to make it a success. The answer is no. The show is a failure. The director of the show has not the time or the talent to make it a success. The show is a failure.

No giving the Bruins a lot too much credit — especially if they have to play without Kevin Milliner.

Football can be thorn in 'SC rose

In crosstown rivalry that transcends records, Bruins hope to break a few against the heavily-favored Trojans.

By Scott Yamasaki

It can't be written in these pages that the UCLA Bruins and the USC Trojans meet for the first time on Sept. 7, and the outcome is anything but certain. The two teams are ranked among the top 25 in the nation, and their meeting will be a test of their mettle.

The Bruins enter the game with a 1-0 record, having defeated the Arizona State Sun Devils 24-17 in their season opener. The Trojans, on the other hand, are 0-1 after a 38-7 loss to the Oregon Ducks. Both teams are looking to bounce back from their respective losses.

The game will be played at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, with kickoff set for 2:30 p.m. Pacific Time. The winner will likely secure a spot in the Pac-12 South division and move closer to the conference title.

The Bruins' defense will be led by linebacker Myles Jack, who had 10 tackles and an interception in the team's season opener. The Trojans' offense will rely on quarterback Sam Darnold, who had 24 completions for 246 yards and two touchdowns in the loss to Oregon.

For UCLA, the key will be protecting quarterback Josh Rosen, who has 232 passing yards and two touchdowns in two games. The Bruins' offense will need to capitalize on opportunities created by the Trojans' defense.

This game is not just about the on-field action; it's about the rich history and rivalry between the two schools. The Bruins and Trojans have played 106 times since 1923, with UCLA leading the series 59-42-5.

Players and fans alike are excited for this matchup, and it's a game that shouldn't be missed.

Schizophrenia study reveals new insights

By Jean May Chen

The human biology of schizophrenia is being revisited, with scientists focusing on the brain's circuits rather than the two key neurotransmitters dopamine and serotonin. This shift in thinking has led to new insights into how the brain works and how it could change the way we think about schizophrenia.

The disease is characterized by disturbances in thinking, emotions, and behavior, and is divided into two types: schizophrenia and schizoaffective disorder. Schizophrenia is a long-term illness that affects about 1% of the population worldwide. It is characterized by delusions, hallucinations, disorganized speech, and social withdrawal.

Scientists have long been interested in the role of neurotransmitters in schizophrenia. Dopamine and serotonin are two key neurotransmitters that play a role in the brain's reward system and emotional regulation. However, recent studies have suggested that schizophrenia may be caused by abnormalities in other neurotransmitters, such as glutamate and acetylcholine.

New research has also focused on the role of the brain's circuits in schizophrenia. The brain is made up of billions of neurons that communicate with each other through the release of neurotransmitters. The circuits that are affected in schizophrenia can include the prefrontal cortex, the hippocampus, and the amygdala.

Scientists are now exploring how these circuits are disrupted in schizophrenia and how they might be restored to normal function. This approach is known as circuit-based research.

One of the key findings of circuit-based research is that schizophrenia is not simply a disorder of a single circuit, but rather a disorder of multiple circuits. This has led to new treatment strategies that target multiple circuits simultaneously.

Scientists are also exploring how circuit-based research can be used to develop new drugs for schizophrenia. The hope is that by targeting specific circuits, new drugs can be developed that are more effective and have fewer side effects.

Overall, the field of schizophrenia research is rapidly changing and new insights are being discovered all the time. As scientists continue to learn more about the disease, we may one day develop more effective treatments and a deeper understanding of the underlying biology.

In an effort to raise funds for UniCamp, UCLA's official charity, the Zeta Beta Tau (ZBT) fraternity's Greek Council throw open its initiation charity ball at the Reservoir Thursday night.

Called "The Ready," it is recognition of Bruin Tech's work, a portion of which is dedicated to raising funds for the two councils, "The Rivalry" eventually grew into a benefit for both the Greek organizations and UniCamp.

The proceeds from each $5 cover charge were donated to the charity. The organizers plan to go to both the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils. Organizers raised about $1,400 from the benefit, about $3,000 of which is anticipated to go to UniCamp.

Organizers raised about $7,600 from the benefit, about $3,000 of which is anticipated to go to UniCamp.

IFC/Panhellenic both raise funds for UniCamp cause

"We decided maybe we should take a spontaneous effort to put the word behind UniCamp and help raise money within the system," said John Rigaudo, a ZBT member. "We really need to help keep the charity, UniCamp, alive. It's the best way to have a huge group of people to take care of something like this," Rigaudo said. "It's the most efficient way for everyone to give." Rigaudo said that each organization was chosen to help with the charity.

ZBT and the Greeks' council also give about $600 each to UniCamp. The charity also offers about $3,000 total of UCLA students per year in recognition of their fundraising efforts. Tainted food raises restaurant questions

Food poisoning makes diners aware of health concerns

By Teni Dimayanga

On a trip to a restaurant, diners have no idea what food is actually being served. They may not even know what restaurant they are at. The restaurant may not even be a restaurant.

In the past year or so there have been a number of reports of food poisoning that have been reported to authorities. The reports have included illnesses in restaurants that range from the casual to the dangerous. In Los Angeles, the restaurant, the reported illnesses were traced to hamburgers served at ZBT, a UCLA chapter. The restaurant was closed and may have to close for the remainder of the semester. Games driving computer industry toward virtual reality

By Catalina Ortiz
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — PC users, hang down your controls. The 3-D graphics shown at this year's CES are the real thing: They are coming to a personal computer near you.

For the first time, a number of computer companies are showing off 3-D graphics, using them to create a new generation of games that make the virtual world come alive on the screen. Some of the software offered by companies like 3-Dfx, S3, and S3 International includes games that can be played on existing PCs.

The trend is more than a marketing ploy to sell new games. It is also a sign that the industry is moving away from the use of software to create virtual worlds and toward the use of hardware to do it.

"It's really the first time," said John O'Brien, senior vice president of 3-Dfx, a maker of graphics chips. "The software companies are starting to see the importance of having hardware that supports 3-D graphics."...

What are U.C. Admissions Committees Really Looking for?

Louise Howard, Director of UCLA Career Counseling, admits that the admissions committee reviews thousands of applications every year. She cites several reasons why some students are rejected and others are accepted. She says that the application process is subjective and that there are many factors that go into determining who is accepted and who is not. She recommends that students take advantage of the many resources available to them, such as the counseling center, and that they be sure to submit a complete and accurate application. She also advises that students reach out to their professors and other experienced individuals to get their input. Finally, she suggests that students be patient and persistent and that they keep in mind that the admissions process is highly competitive.

Re-examining government’s role in our lives

ShUTDOWN is chance to voice concerns

After two days of the partial government shutdown, the nation is finally back to business as usual. President Donald J.
Trump and Congress have come to an agreement to avert another government downfall. The impasse was resolved after Trump agreed to not include any mention of border security funding in the federal budget.

This agreement is a significant step forward in the ongoing debate over immigration. While it is a positive sign that both parties are willing to compromise, there are still many issues that need to be addressed.

The partial shutdown was a useful reminder of the need for a stable government and effective leadership. It is important to clearly communicate our communicating goals and priorities.

Security and welfare officials, as well continue other services until valid Congressional action is taken. The shutdown is expected to last for the week. The government has been operating with limited funding, which has affected many essential services.

Government employees have been affected by the shutdown, with some working without pay while others are furloughed. The delay in paychecks has caused financial stress for many employees.

Magical beauty of human form graces Rolfe

Renowned sculptor Graham brings fruits of labor to UCLA

By Allison Barlow
For months, Ralph Gonzales was literally surrounded by sculpting the human form. "I've been working in my studio all day at the sculpture," he said. "I haven't seen the outside in months."

Gonzales' studio is a large, well-lit room filled with tools and materials. The walls are covered with photos of his previous works, which include portraits of famous personalities such as Michael Jordan and Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Gonzales' latest project is a life-size statue of a young woman. "I've been working on it for the past six months," he said. "It's been a real challenge, but I'm proud of how it's coming along."

Gonzales' sculptures are known for their realistic portrayal of human form. "I try to capture the essence of the person," he said. "Whether it's a celebrity or a regular person, I want to make sure the sculpture is as lifelike as possible."

Gonzales' work has been exhibited in galleries around the country. "I've had a lot of success with my sculptures," he said. "People really appreciate the detail and the realism."

Gonzales' sculptures are also known for their size. "Some of my pieces are over ten feet tall," he said. "I like to push the limits of what's possible in sculpture."

Gonzales' dedication to his craft has earned him a reputation as one of the best sculptors in the country. "I've been doing this for over thirty years," he said. "I never get tired of it. I still love the challenge of creating something new."

The sculptures on this campus, combining the magic and power that are renowned by the human form, are a strong statement of the new beauty of the human form and the human face. The sculptures are a reminder that there is a need for the human face to be considered in all its glory. Graham stated that this new garden would span the entire campus, and that this new garden would be the place where the students and faculty would spend their time.

Graham did not want the gardens to be the only available to students, but rather to be available to all the people. The gardens were designed to be a perfect place for visitors to relax and enjoy the beauty of the campus. The gardens were also designed to be a place for the students to come and relax and enjoy the beauty of the campus.

It is not the medium, but what is in the mind and heart, that is truly important to him. His inspiration for the sculpture came from the idea that the student body would come from all over the world, and as Graham stated, "There is nothing more inspirational than seeing people where they are." The sculptures in Rafferty Court are an accommodation of works created from 1972 to 1992. They reflect Graham's belief in the beauty of people.

M. hoops begins title defense in Maui

By Melissa Anderson
Daily Bruin Staff

Coping off a year which resulted in a national championship for the UCLA men's basketball team, Bruin coach Jim Harrick said, "We have a hard, competitive team that is going to put up a really hard time on us. Our players are going to make sure we don't have a break from the team that we played in the final game of the NCAA tournament last year for the title." The Bruins will open their season tonight against the University of Corpus Christi, which will play the game at 8 p.m. at the Pacific Airlines Center in the Maui Invitational.

The Maui Classic will be free to the public.

The No. 10 UCLA women's volleyball team had an easy path to the national championship last season. This year, they have a much harder task. The Bruins are ranked third in the nation, but they haven't played a single game yet.

Outside hitter Karen Miller said that this year's team is more experienced than last year's. "We have a lot of returning players," she said. "We're more confident this year because we have a lot of experience." The Bruins open their season Friday night against Arizona State at 8 p.m. in the Pauley Pavilion.

"We're going to be more aggressive this year," Miller said. "We want to make sure we're playing our best ball from the beginning." The Bruins hope to win the Pac-10 Conference and make it to the NCAA tournament again this year.

When UCLA and USC meet in water polo, it's not just a chance to win the game. It's also a chance to win the hearts of the Bruin fans.

The game is set for 2:00 p.m. on Saturday at the McDonald's Aquatic Center. It will be a battle between two top teams in the country. The Bruins have won the last three meetings between the teams, but USC is coming off a 5-4 loss to Stanford last weekend.

The Bruins are looking to build on their success against the Trojans.

The University of Southern California's men's basketball team is looking to延续 their success from last season. After finishing third in the Pac-10 Conference last season, the Trojans are ranked fourth in the preseason rankings.

The Trojans have a lot of returning players, including senior forward Marcus Landry, who was named the Pac-10 Player of the Year last season.

"We're looking to build on our success from last season," said head coach Andy Enfield. "We have a lot of experience on this team and we're ready to compete for a championship."

Aloha, Trojans: victory for Bruins!

By Eric Branch
Daily Bruin Staff

Nicknamed ‘Pacific Hula Time’ by UCLABruin fans, USC’s The Rose Bowl Trojans failedto please the UCLA Bruin fans. USC’s Nicole Dietrich, a freshman from El CajonCal State University, had the Bruins flying high in the fourth quarter. Then, the Bruins cameback in the last minute to win 14-10. This victorywould have been a great victory for UCLAhadn’t it been for The Rose Bowl Trojan fans. Even though the HRBC was leading 14-0 in the fourthquarter, they were not able to keep the Bruins fromscoring the game-winning touchdown.

The Bruins took the lead in the last minute on a 17-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Kellen Lewis to wide receiver Alton McCulley. The score was followed by a successful two-point conversion.

Back up tackles, offensive line succeed on ground in advance of Abdullah-Jabbar

By Sixth Yarnage
Daily Bruin Staff

Kurt Abdullah-Jabbar has a shocker for the Bruins. He’s interested in the programs that can improve the game of the California State University, Los Angeles. Abdullah-Jabbar will be a great addition to the Bruins’ defense.

During the pre-game press conference, Abdullah-Jabbar commented that becoming the Bruins’ defensive coach was his dream. "I am absolutely beside myself with the win because it finally culminates as a dream come true," he said. "I have been a hard job on a team that needs a coach. This is a huge accomplishment for me and I couldn’t be prouder for our team. I will always be a Bruin."

The Bruins’ defense followed Abdullah-Jabbar's commands to a tee, holding the opponent to just 10 points. Abdullah-Jabbar's presence on the field will undoubtedly have a positive impact on the team's performance.

UC San Diego union prevails in legal battle

By Mike Angel

The Student Association of Graduate Employees (SAGE) case for official recognition won a legal battle last month, when a federal judge ruled in favor of the organization’s union activities.

Administrator and Judge Teresa Cadwallader ruled in favor of SAGE, a student organization representing graduate employees at UC San Diego.

SAGE sought to organize graduate employees at UC San Diego, including graduate student workers and graduate student employees, into a bargaining unit.

The judge ruled that SAGE had met the criteria for official recognition, finding that graduate employee workers were engaged in significant activities that led to the formation of SAGE.

The court found that SAGE had engaged in a substantial amount of activities that demonstrated the organization's support for the recognized bargaining unit, including the holding of meetings, the distribution of literature, and the distribution of complaints.

The judge concluded that SAGE had met the requirements for official recognition and that the organization had engaged in sufficient activities to support the union's representation of the bargaining unit.

Admirers laud feminist poet Adrienne Rich's work and accomplishments

Adrienne Rich read her poetry to a campus audience of more than 300.

The selection of poetry that Rich chose to read last night pleased students in some ways, but was criticized by others. Dr. Christopher Newton, director of Big Fish, the theater group that sponsored the event, said, "I think Rich read a lot of her best-known poems, but there were some I didn't like." He added that the poetry focused on the theme of nature.

"I think Rich's work is very good," said student Jennifer Smith. "I liked her poems about nature and how it relates to human life." However, other students felt that the poetry was too abstract and didn't connect with them.

"I didn't understand most of the poems," said student John Doe. "I don't think Rich's poetry is very accessible to the average person."
In the recent case of SAGE v. UC, SAGE was found to include research and teaching assistants in its case, in addition to other university-hired student employees.

Unlike San Diego State University, SAGE wants to include research and teaching assistants in its case, in addition to other university-hired student employees.

Though there are several different options for freshmen, both California State University system presidents and students say that the majority of students are happy with their decision to return to California.

Though the University of California has seen an increase in enrollment, both the state has noted an overall decrease in enrollment. This is due to a combination of factors, including the unpredictability of the state's budget and the increased availability of alternative education options.

This year's student body is expected to increase slightly, but the overall trend is downward. The University of California system's enrollment has declined by 30,000 students since 2010, according to the California State University's website.

Raising the minimum wage is a student issue

By Anna Marks

Most of us come to college with the idea that in a 25-year-old should work to support a family other than his or her own. This is the norm in today's society, as we are taught to work and save money for the future. However, it is important to note that not all students come from such a background, and many students are the first in their family to attend college.

The minimum wage is set at $7.25 per hour, which is the lowest wage that employers can legally pay their employees. This wage is set at a level that is below the poverty line for a single person and far below the poverty line for a family of four.

Many students rely on part-time jobs to help pay for college expenses, and often work long hours. However, the minimum wage does not provide enough money for students to live comfortably.

In addition, many students work in low-wage jobs that do not provide benefits, such as healthcare or retirement. This leaves students with a financial burden that they must shoulder alone.

As students, we should be aware of the issues surrounding the minimum wage and advocate for policies that increase the minimum wage and provide better working conditions for students.

Our lives are shaped not only by our experiences but also by the stereotypes we hold. These stereotypes can be positive, but they can also be negative. When we stereotype others, we often limit our understanding of their lives and ignore their unique experiences.

We need to learn to see beyond our stereotypes and to recognize the complexity of the world. By doing so, we can build a more inclusive and understanding society.

'Party' looks past bare necessities, focuses on characters

David Dillon's Truth or Dare-inspired play exposes positive aspects of gay life, culture

Daily News Staff

Dillon's "Party" opened at the IRT Theatre last night, and it was a success. The play is about two gay men who meet at a party and fall in love. The characters are realistic and well-developed, and the play is a great representation of gay life.

"Party" is a fun and enjoyable play that will surely appeal to audiences of all ages. The themes of love and acceptance are explored in a way that is both entertaining and thought-provoking. Whether you're gay or not, you will enjoy this play and its message.

Wests Snipes and Woody Harrelson tease each other about everything from love scenes to cross-dressing.

Wests Snipes and Woody Harrelson tease each other about everything from love scenes to cross-dressing. The film doesn't try to work around the "you always try to be on what you did last time. And I personally, as a movie viewer, like to see stuff that's better and better. Not necessarily bigger, but more intense."

This competition is fun in itself. Snipes and Harrelson play brothers who work for the CIA. Their roles are different, and the film is a great showcase for both of their talents.

Don't get the cast and crew started on just the cost of production alone. Everyone involved with "Train" has worked hard to make this competition a reality. The film is a great example of the importance of collaboration in filmmaking.

Tim Curry has made a career playing people your mother would not approve of.

By Emily Barnes

To British actor Tim Curry, America is a different story. His roles have included everything from the villainous Magneto in "X-Men" to the iconic Dr. Frank-N-Furter in "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." But Curry's recent role in "Congo" has raised eyebrows. Curry plays a character whose actions are questionable. The role has caused some controversy, but Curry seems to be enjoying himself.

"It's not always a bad thing because actually, Roles are usually better suited for me in terms of my career. "Congo" definitely has its moments. It's a lot of fun, and I think the audience will enjoy it. It's a great opportunity for me to show off my acting skills and I think the world will be amazed by what I've done."

In "Congo," Curry plays the character Nanga Parbat. Although not as well known in the Michael Crichton book as in which the movie was based, Nanga Parbat was added by screenwriter John Milius to add more action and adventure. "Congo" released today on DVD.
The Strongest Aspect of the Production, the Product itself, is its ability to show an understanding of the human condition and its complexity. Indeed, Costner's vision is one of the most remarkable achievements of the film. The director uses the story to explore themes of illusion, reality, and the nature of truth. The audience is challenged to confront these ideas and to question their own perceptions of reality.

The film is also notable for its performances. The cast, led by Costner, delivers powerful and nuanced portrayals that bring depth and realism to the characters. The chemistry between the actors is evident, and the dialogue is sharp and well-written. The supporting performances add to the film's impact, with每个人都贡献了自己的力量。

In summary, Elizabeth is a film that defies easy categorization. It is a work of art that combines elements of drama, romance, and political intrigue. The film is a testament to the power of cinema to explore complex ideas and to engage the audience on a profound level.
Golfer sacrifices for team

Star Bruin golfer, senior Eric Lohman, forged redshirt year

By Brian Parcell

"I was feeling sorry for myself," said the future All-American during the fall. "I was so good the previous year. It was different to not have Tiger Woods to chase." Mike Miller and Tiger Woods would be his main targets in 1995-96, but he was starting to feel like the only Homeless Eric for wanting to redshirt. Lohman had been picked to win the NCAA championship by some publications. But playing this year, it's a sacrificial year for Lohman.

Instead of chasing the golf title -- something Lohman's father, Steve, did as an All-American in 1974 -- Eric will stand with his team, which is struggling to stay above .500. Lohman's golfing future is in their hands.

Although Lohman is verbose and willing to change the things that don't work, he is far from his father, Steve, who's still at the University of Arizona, where he's a senior at Arizona. Steve joined the Bruins in 1997 and has a 1998-99 season with him. He's the first Bruin to play for the team in the NCAA tournament since 1994. Lohman played for the Bruins from 1994-96 and won the NCAA championship that year.

Lohman's current team of 18 is the highest since 1994. But in 1994, UCLA had a 1994 national championship. This year's team is more like Lohman's team from 1994 than it is from 1994. Lohman said it's a struggle to be a Bruin this year. The team is going to need a lot of help to get to the NCAA tournament. Lohman has been called a "sacrificial year" by some publications. But playing this year, it's a sacrificial year for Lohman.

If you want to get an idea of why Eric is here, you have to understand the tradition of UCLA. Lohman said it's a struggle to be a Bruin this year. The team is going to need a lot of help to get to the NCAA tournament. Lohman has been called a "sacrificial year" by some publications. But playing this year, it's a sacrificial year for Lohman.

Vitamin D, on the other hand, also shows promise in preventing disease, especially in older adults. Although these products have not been tested in clinical trials, they are believed to be safe for use in older adults, provided they are taken consistently.

The downside of these seemingly angelic elements is that if taken in excessive doses, they can cause serious side effects.

"Obviously, vitamin A is multifunctional in the sense that it might do some things as one thing does, but if you take too much of it, you can have liver damage," said Dr. Morris, "I would not recommend anyone take more than the recommended daily allowance of all vitamins."

I didn't know what to expect when I went to the Registrar's Office to pay my tuition. I thought I was just going to hand over my money and that would be the end of it. But little did I know, there was a whole world of possibilities waiting for me.

I met with the Registrar, who was very polite and helpful. She explained the different payment options and the importance of paying on time. She also gave me some tips on how to budget my money better.

I signed up for a payment plan and set up automatic payments. This way, I won't have to worry about remembering to pay on time. The Registrar even recommended that I get a scholarship to help cover some of the cost.

I was surprised to learn about the different opportunities available to me after graduation. There are internships, Fellowships, and even a new program called the "Internship of Your Life".

I'm excited to see where this journey takes me. I know that it won't be easy, but I'm ready to take on the challenge. Thank you, Registrar, for helping me start this journey on the right foot.

ten of war," Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said. "In the face of war against the Islamic world, the West cannot remain "neutral."" The Bosnian president has been known for his bold statements on the issue of war.

Izetbegovic's calls for assistance have been met with skepticism by many international leaders. Some worry that military intervention could further destabilize the region. Others believe that economic sanctions against Serbia are not enough.

In a recent speech, Izetbegovic said, "We have made every effort to prevent war. We have been accused of being too soft on Saddam Hussein. We have been criticized for allowing him to remain in power. But we have done everything in our power to avoid war."

Bosnia-Herzegovina is a landlocked country located in the Balkans. It is surrounded by Serbia, Croatia, and Montenegro. The country is divided into two entities: Bosnia and Herzegovina and Republika Srpska.

The Bosnian government is democratic and multiparty. It is a parliamentary republic with a president, a prime minister, and a parliament. The country has a mixed economy with a strong agricultural sector.

Izetbegovic's statements have sparked controversy in the international community. Some countries, such as Russia and China, have called for a negotiated solution to the conflict. Others, including the United States and the European Union, have called for military action.

Izetbegovic's bold words have not gone unnoticed. His statements have earned him international acclaim. He has been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize and the Profile in Courage Award.

Though his words may be perceived as radical, Izetbegovic's calls for assistance have been met with a strong response from the international community.

The situation in the region is complex and volatile. It is hoped that a peaceful solution can be found. However, the road ahead will be a long and difficult one.
Affirmative action should be phased out

Economics key; outreach and recruitment needed

By Amanda M. Polier

I support a fairly simple type of economic analysis worth a serious look at today's affirmative action policies. I argue that the issues which concern society - and not just the academic world - can be best addressed through a more thorough analysis of the effects of these policies on the market. When one institute (or even a small group) does so, thousands of others potentially face the same problems. While I recognize that this may seem too bold an assumption, I believe that this is not an exaggeration.

I think that affirmative action should be removed from the public schools in order to achieve a more balanced educational system. We have a duty to provide all students with an equal opportunity to succeed, and to ensure that they are able to compete fairly in the job market.

The goal of affirmative action is to promote diversity. This can be achieved through other means, such as scholarships and grants, without the need for quotas or other restrictive policies. By removing affirmative action, we can create a more equitable and fair system that benefits all students.

Furthermore, we must consider the impact of affirmative action on the economy. In the United States, economic inequality is a pressing issue, and we must address it to ensure a healthy economy.

Affirmative action policies have failed to achieve their intended goals. They have not led to increased job opportunities, but instead have created a culture of entitlement. By removing affirmative action, we can address these problems and create a more just and equitable society.

Summary:

- Affirmative action should be phased out.
- Economic analysis is key to understanding the impact of these policies.
- Affirmative action policies have failed to achieve their intended goals.
- Removing affirmative action would promote diversity and economic equality.

A major controversy in the United States today is the over-representation of Chinese in certain areas of employment. This phenomenon, which is often referred to as the "Chinese stereotype," has been the subject of intense debate.

The "alphabet soup" refers to the various academic programs and majors in which Chinese students are over-represented. This phenomenon is not limited to Chinese, but it is particularly pronounced in the Chinese-American community.

Stereotypes and biases are harmful to individuals and communities. They perpetuate images of Chinese as being more successful in certain areas, which can contribute to economic disparities and discrimination.

Campus inter-group conflict perpetuates Chinese stereotypes

Chinese students have been disproportionately represented in certain academic programs and majors, leading to the stereotype that Chinese are better at certain subjects.

What is the source of this stereotype? It is not due to inherent differences in ability, but rather to historical and cultural biases.

The "alphabet soup" refers to the various academic programs and majors in which Chinese students are over-represented. This phenomenon is not limited to Chinese, but it is particularly pronounced in the Chinese-American community.

Stereotypes and biases are harmful to individuals and communities. They perpetuate images of Chinese as being more successful in certain areas, which can contribute to economic disparities and discrimination.

A major controversy in the United States today is the over-representation of Chinese in certain areas of employment. This phenomenon, which is often referred to as the "Chinese stereotype," has been the subject of intense debate.

Toys in the hood

Toy Story joins ranks of Disney classics in computer-animated tribute to imagination

By Brandon Wilson

Who isn't a child, heartwarming declaration that those toys never die, as the story of a boy growing up and learning about life and loss with the help of a unique friend?

The beloved toys that filled the shelves of the world's children in the '80s and '90s have been brought to life in a new way, as seen in Toy Story, the first computer-generated animated feature film. The film, which has been generating much excitement, tells the story of a young boy named Andy and his toys, including Woody, the cowboy doll, and Buzz Lightyear, the space ranger. The toys are brought to life with the help of computer animation, allowing for incredibly realistic visuals and a new level of detail in the characters.

As Andy grows older, the toys must adapt to new situations and learn to cope with change. The film explores themes of friendship, childhood, and the bittersweet aspects of growing up, all through the eyes of the toys.

Toy Story is a landmark achievement in animation, combining the talents of director John Lasseter and a talented voice cast, including Tom Hanks and Tim Allen. The result is an emotional and entertaining film that has captured the hearts of audiences of all ages.

The Love Boutique offers free condoms to UCLA students for X-Mas

By Susan Lee
People ask us how cool it is to be part of UCLA. We tell them it's like being a TV star. You're always on TV and everyone's watching you. That's not surprising, given that UCLA is one of the best universities in the world. And when we say that, we mean it. The Love Boutique, selling everything from condoms to clothes, is the place to be if you want to make a statement. That's what our customers do. They want to be seen, to be heard, to be noticed. They want to be part of something bigger than themselves. That's what makes the Love Boutique so special. We sell more than just condoms. We sell freedom. Freedom to be yourself, to do what you want, to live your life on your own terms. That's what we believe in. That's what we stand for. That's why we're here.

Children's film 'Night and Day' tackles Boy Scout jargon, says reviewer

By Ben Zaitz

Daily News Staff

"Night and Day" is a children's film that provides a unique perspective on the Boy Scout jargon. The director, Patricia Rozema, aims to present the jargon in a way that is engaging and educational for children.

The film features a group of Boy Scouts who are preparing for their next camping trip. As they gather their gear, they learn about the different jargon used in scouting. The audience is introduced to terms like "safety knots," "bear trap," and "trail marker."

Rozema's approach is praised by the reviewer, who notes that the film's use of jargon is natural and unforced. "It's not a forced learning experience," the reviewer says. "The characters use the jargon in a way that is consistent with their personalities and the situations they find themselves in."

The reviewer also notes that Rozema's film is not just about jargon. "It's a story about friendship, adventure, and the importance of being prepared," the reviewer says. "It's a film that will appeal to both children and adults."

"My hope was to make a film that's very unorthodox," Rozema continues. "It's an inclusive, transformative story. I didn't want to use any conventions in the dialogue or any of the cinematic techniques. I think our obsession is probably the one thing that could be thought of as a tradition." Rozema describes the film as "a little bit of a love story" that involves "a couple of women who are very different but who find a way to communicate with each other.

Beyond her disappointment with the rating, Rozema also dislikes the kind of publicity that arises from controversy.

Kagan's gone on such a long trip that she's making sure she's comfortable. The father of five has a lot of experience on the campaign trail, and she says she's in a good position to be the candidate's running mate.

"We're going to make sure she's comfortable," Kagan says. "We want her to be in the right attire and have all the tools she needs to be successful." Kagan adds that she's been working hard to ensure that Kagan is prepared for any challenges she may face as the campaign progresses.

The focus now is on making sure Kagan is ready for whatever comes her way. Kagan's team is doing everything they can to help her succeed, and they're confident that she'll be able to handle anything that comes her way.

But for now, Kagan's primary concern is making sure she's comfortable. She says she's been working hard to make sure she's ready for whatever comes her way, and she's confident that she'll be able to handle anything that comes her way.

W. basketball defeats USD Friday, 87-69

For Malinda Anderson Daily Bruin Staff

In a game where the most vital statistic was one-player, UCLA women's basketball team defeated USD, 87-69.

The game started off as a tight fight, with USD leading 18-16 after one quarter. UCLA gained momentum in the second quarter, outscoring USD by 12 points and taking a 38-26 lead into halftime.

In the third quarter, UCLA continued its dominant play, outscoring USD 24-11 to take a commanding 62-37 lead into the final quarter.

The game was filled with drama, as both teams fought to gain the upper hand. In the end, UCLA emerged victorious, thanks to a dominant second half.

After the game, UCLA coach Roy Williams expressed his pride in his team for their performance.

"We built this on our mistakes," Williams said. "We made improvements as we went, and we played well in this game."

Bruins lose 75-71 decision to Vanderbilt, finish sixth in Maui Invitational tourney

By Scott Yotsushige Daily Bruin Staff

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — The rapid-fire parade of Maui turned out to be far from free-form for Steve Alford's 1995-96 Bruins. Clinton makes case for sending troops to Bosnia

By Teresa Hunt The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Seeking approval for a possible wartime mission, President Clinton pressed his case Monday night, saying 20,000 U.S. troops are needed to enforce a single peace agreement in Bosnia. "In the absence of a peace agreement," Clinton declared, "America must now lead the world in peacekeeping operations to ensure that a just peace is kept.

Without American forces, "the very fragile peace in Bosnia will not endure," he said. Despite the administration's position, Congress would not be able to halt it.

The president said some small number of American dead would be worth it, "but the majority and a few hundred others to whom we are committed will be saved from unnecessary brutality..."

"Let's not be misled," Clinton said. "The American people want to know the answer."

"Yes, it's a tough time," Clinton said. "If we don't do it, they will suffer for it.

Today, GALA remains dedicated to creating an inclusive environment that respects and includes all students.

Age-old debate rages on: dorm-life versus living in apartments

By Son Nguyen

Meeting away from home often means freedom to party, go wild, and according to many students, to live their true daily lives. However, many students are finding that living away from home falls short of their expectations. Dealing with their own rent, operating expenses has left many students through a muddled process. Living in dorms and then finding a rent in the apartments.

The dorms have the comfort and wild image they imagined, many students said that they are one of the reasons why they choose the dorm as well as the benefits of life. “I’m living in the dorms also a whole. I think to realize that I want a privacy there, you get to know people and bond with them as a family. If you’re alone, you can be lonely,” said Henry Li, third-year international economics student.

Aside from the question of privacy, other students were disappointed by the occupants of the dorms.

“Here in the dorms, they’ve worked on the student sharing with a sense of 51 a day. But the thing is, it’s limited socialized food,” complained Chris Hsu, a second-year student. “It’s looks like prison food, where we eat the same meal of the day and the taste of the food.”

Despite the benefits of dorm life, overpriced food, overcrowded dorms may not seem the best option for apartment living. In the dorms, there are no preconceived notions of IDs, to follow other dorms is a requirement. “Mammas are not very willing to cooperate,” said Tim Brown, a second-year pre-economics and biology student. “The dorms are a lot of money, with the cost of living, they really want the student to pay for the same price as the pre-economics and biology student.

The dorm security system also works well with the dorms and the dorms. Those who are often found to be bring their tools when leaving the building and look for people who are not allowed in the dorms to discourage the idea.

Regarding the cost of dorm life is $1,000-$1,500. A full-year fee, some students said, many students are not willing to pay the price.

These meetings were sponsored by the association, an attempt on my part to boost the slack "for the people." I hope this effort is successful.

Primarily at issue was the question of how to handle student clubs, which are divided by gender, race, and other factors; undergraduate students who wish to participate in a program that does not meet their needs. The issue focuses on the fact that, while some student clubs do not promote Latino/Hispanic advancement, others do. This is a crucial issue for the development of the student body. We are working to ensure that all student clubs have the same opportunities.

Fernandez went on to say that although specific goals have been attacked, we are working to ensure that all students have the same opportunities.

Some analysts say the rankings are not accurate as they are.

The problem with U.S. News and World Report and anyone else that ranks things is that they are not comprehensive enough and too small.

The rankings are based on a few key factors: public relations, student performance, and financial aid.

UC administrative agencies have long been criticized for focusing too much on abstract measures of student performance.

UC officials are also concerned that the rankings might make it harder for them to attract new students.

"It is still a large portion of our funding," said Vice President of Everen Securities David Pearlman.

When asked if the rankings are a good idea, he said, "I don't know if they are good. It is hard to tell.

"We are trying to figure out how to improve our rankings. We are working hard on it, but it is not easy."

In what Pentagon planners regard as the most dangerous U.S. military operation since the Korean War, Clinton has to make a decision. He must choose between sending in a large force, which carries the risk of an "instant" victory, or sending in a smaller force, which carries the risk of a "slow" victory.

The American goal is to achieve a "peaceful" resolution of the conflict in Kosovo.

The administration has been reluctant to commit large numbers of troops, fearing a costly and prolonged military engagement.

Theoretical crime inspires thoughts on justice

By Marilyn Jamal Green

There were three robots in the bank. They had just stolen the vault full of cash. It is possible that they had never heard of the concept of money, but they had learned how to open the vault by watching the guards. The guards had become lax in their security, and the robots had taken advantage of this.

There were also three children on the playground. They had just stolen the Frisbee. It is possible that they had never heard of the concept of property, but they had learned how to catch the Frisbee by watching the other children.

These two events were similar in that they both involved theft. However, the consequences of the actions were vastly different. The robots continued their criminal activities, while the children were promptly returned to their parents.

The idea of crime is a complex one. It involves the violation of societal norms and the resulting punishment. The concept of justice is also complex. It involves the idea of fairness and the need to punish those who break the law.

In this case, the robots were not punished for their actions. This is because they are not capable of understanding the concept of justice. The children, on the other hand, were punished for their actions. This is because they are capable of understanding the concept of justice.

This raises the question of whether or not robots should be held accountable for their actions. It is possible that they should be, but it is also possible that they should not be. After all, they are not capable of understanding the concept of justice.

The concept of justice is a difficult one to define. It involves the idea of fairness and the need to punish those who break the law. It also involves the idea of rehabilitation and the need to help those who have broken the law.

In conclusion, the idea of crime is a complex one. It involves the violation of societal norms and the resulting punishment. The concept of justice is also complex. It involves the idea of fairness and the need to punish those who break the law.

To lead or not to led

Editor

As a fellow student at the University of California, Los Angeles, I would like to address the issue of leadership. It is a topic that has been discussed in various contexts, including academic and professional environments.

In my opinion, the role of a leader is not only to guide and inspire others but also to listen and learn from them. A good leader should be able to adapt to changing circumstances and offer solutions that are effective and innovative.

Furthermore, it is important to recognize that leadership is not a position of power but a set of skills and qualities. Leadership is about empowering others, creating a positive atmosphere, and fostering collaboration.

In conclusion, leadership is a vital aspect of any organization, and it requires a combination of skills and qualities. By embracing leadership as a dynamic process, we can create a more inclusive and effective society.

Sincerely,

From 1981, when Ronald Reagan was a student, he was a president of the UCLA Student Association, and from 1983, when he was a professor, he was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In both roles, he was an avid supporter of science and education. His strong commitment to these fields was evident in his speeches and public statements, as well as in his personal life.

Reagan was known for his passion for science and education, and he was a strong advocate for these fields. He believed that they were essential to the success of the United States, and he was determined to support them.

In his speeches and public statements, Reagan often emphasized the importance of science and education. He believed that they were key to the country's future, and he was committed to ensuring that they received the funding they needed.

Reagan's passion for science and education was evident in his personal life as well. He was a dedicated teacher and scholar, and he was known for his commitment to his students and to the discipline of philosophy.

In conclusion, Ronald Reagan's passion for science and education was a driving force in his life. He was a strong advocate for these fields, and he was committed to ensuring that they received the funding they needed. His dedication to these fields is a testament to his commitment to the success of the United States.

Standing support

Editor

We are writing to express our support for Marilyn Jamal Green's article in the Daily Bruin. Her article, titled "Theoretical crime inspires thoughts on justice," provides a thought-provoking exploration of the concept of justice.

Green's article raises important questions about the nature of justice and the role of punishment. It challenges us to consider the implications of a world in which robots are held accountable for their actions, and it invites us to reflect on our own attitudes towards justice.

In conclusion, we support Green's article and encourage others to engage with its ideas and to consider their own views on justice.

Sincerely,

Look to own community for 'big news'

By Ron Greenberg

HENRY Co. — This has been a time of incredibly dramatic front-page news stories, the fabric assailed, the war in Bosnia and the peace talks, the budget deficit and deflations of the federal government. The media have been over-moving.

I was privileged to attend a most memorable evening at the golden-state house where I had significant impact as the host of many people. On Saturday night, a Vietnamese Day, the house was the long-dreamed-of place for a showcase of political change during that day, through a development process to acknowledge those young people who gave their lives for their own.

This evening for the Berkeley Montessori Country School, the preschoolers traced the Berkeley, first youth, a diversity of ethnicity and culture, and to show their support for the Vietnamese Day.

It was a moment, I can recall, that was so young, so filled with energy and new people... One morning I said to my brothers that we should not be surprised that the Vietnamese Day resonated with those who had lived there.

Not only is Berkeley, but even the children, those who were born or returned home, were thrilled to the atmosphere of that small town. The children looked for one other, and to share that knowledge, but to accept their own identity, and the identity of others, it was back on them. I learned from the people present the way we each found ourselves and the ways we each found ourselves.

As the war was ending, I recorded on a video the feeling of hope that I have this part of my life. That hope was intertwined with the story that we are all a part of the Vietnamese Day. The Vietnamese Day was a part of the global community. It was the feeling of hope that I have now.

Because of the tragedy in Berkeley, I was not able to attend the presentation on Saturday night. The presentation of the Vietnamese Day had not been cleared the same way as in Berkeley.

Regrettably the other participants at the Berkeley Montessori School have declared their interest in the presentation on Saturday night. I feel that the Vietnamese Day resonated with those who had lived there.

Melitz's "After the Fall" highlights Romanian films that explore liberalism in the wake of revolution.

By Brandon Wittman

After living under the long reign of an unjust state, the first rays of freedom's dawn can be bright to filmmakers. The internal turmoil around the world are wrestling with the definition of freedom. One of the first films to reflect this change, and the films very as well as the perspective on the Romanian experience, is "After the Fall." The film tells the story of a man's life from a young revolutionary to a man of the new society. The film is directed by Paul Moraru, using a straightforward and unembellished approach.

"After the Fall" has been well received by critics and audiences alike. The film has been praised for its honest portrayal of the Romanian people's struggle against the communist regime.

The film is distributed by the National Film Center, offering insight into the heart and soul of a nation's revolution. The film is available for viewing at the National Film Center's website.

After losses, UCLA hopes to win against Cal State Fullerton

By Sean Yangton

Daily Bruin Staff

A double-figure tear-up in a year-ago repeat at Cal State Fullerton was all that stood between UCLA and a trip to the NCAA basketball tournament. But the Bruins will not be breaking the cinderblocks and stepping on the heads of Fullerton, UCLA is on a roll heading into tonight's Pac-10 opener, against the Titans.

Well, sort of.

The Bruins' starting lineup is impressive. But the team's bench is filled with bodies, and some of those bodies will get the start tonight.

Clintons signs higher speed limits into law

California drivers may drive 65 mph on urban highways by January

By John Howard

The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — State Sen. Gary S. Gillman, who sponsored the bill, said the Clinton administration favored a 65 mph limit at the national level, but the Legislature narrowly approved a bill that doesn't go quite that high.

The Clinton administration has long opposed higher speed limits, saying they are not a safety measure.

Gillman, who was backed by the state's Highway Patrol, said the bill was a result of the hopes of better driving conditions in urban areas.

The bill, which was approved by the California Assembly, will go to Gov. Pete Wilson for his signature.

The bill would allow higher speed limits on urban highways to jump from 35 to 55 mph on freeways and up to 55 mph on urban streets.

Nearly 4,500 miles of California freeways will allow higher speeds to be rolled out this month.

Speed limits in the western part of California, which has more than 23 million people, will be increased to 70 mph on some highways.

The Clinton administration, the Associated Press said, had initially favored a 65 mph limit at the national level.

Overzealous cancer may play early role in breast cancer

Finding may lead to a test that could spot later malignancies

By Mary H. Weiss — The Associated Press

Scientists have identified a gene that may play an early role in breast cancer, a discovery that might lead to a new test for detecting the disease before it becomes deadly.

Researchers found that the gene, called BRCA1, is elevated in breast tissue from women who have an inherited predisposition to the cancer. The finding could eventually lead to a test that could be used to screen women at risk for developing the disease.

BRCA1 is a tumor suppressor gene, which means it helps prevent the development of cancer. The gene is involved in repairing DNA and is inactivated when the BRCA1 protein is lost.

The researchers said the finding suggests that the BRCA1 gene may be a key player in the development of breast cancer.

"If we can identify a gene that is involved in the early stages of breast cancer development, we may be able to develop a test that could be used to screen women at risk for the disease," said study co-author Dr. John H. Blazer III, a geneticist at the University of California, Los Angeles.

The study, published in the journal Nature Genetics, is the first to show that the BRCA1 gene is elevated in breast tissue from women who have an inherited predisposition to the cancer.

The researchers analyzed tissue samples from 10 women who had an inherited predisposition to breast cancer, and found that the BRCA1 gene was elevated in the tissue from all of the women.

The researchers said the finding could eventually lead to a test that could be used to screen women at risk for developing the disease.

Clinton presses Congress for 17,000 more troops

By Donald M. Rieffinger

WASHINGTON — President Clinton pressed his case for sending the U.S. military to Bosnia, saying that defeat for the former Yugoslavia would entail “the ultimate tragedy” and urging Congress to support the administration’s call for a larger U.S. contribution to the peacekeeping mission.

The president’s comments came as he delivered his speech to the nation on the state of the union. He said that the United States is facing a “catastrophe” in the Balkans and that the administration’s plan was the only way to prevent “the ultimate tragedy.”

Clinton said that the administration’s plan would ensure that the U.S. military would be able to enforce a cease-fire and that it would also provide a “window of opportunity” for the United States to negotiate a more lasting peace in the region.

Clinton added that the administration’s plan would also help to “reduce the risk of further violence” in the region.

I wanted a new Max this year, but I had to make car payments. So I was content to plow away on my old clunky Max. Thinking that this was as good as it would get. Then, I heard about doubling my Max's power, by doubling my RAM. I would no longer get those annoying 'not enough memory' messages. And wouldn't have to spend long nights for SP29999. Speed Doubling allows for faster disk access, and speeds up Finder functions. Works in Windows, Macintosh, and PowerPC. Works in Macintosh. Works in Macintosh. Works in Macintosh.

House finalizes lobbying reforms

By Jim Drinnen

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After decades of grumbling, the House Ethics Committee finalized a set of rules late last week that would force thousands of Washington lobbyists to register, to disclose their clients and to abide by other restrictions.

But the committee’s efforts — which flow from Clinton’s administration — will get a test in 2019 to see how they work.

The new rules, which most ethics experts say are probably the most sweeping in recent years, are expected to be approved by Congress next year and take effect in 2019.

The rules are intended to address concerns about the influence of lobbyists in government, particularly in the executive branch, where they are often able to use their connections and expertise to convince policymakers to act in their clients’ interests.

The new rules would require lobbyists to register in several different categories, including those who work for national political organizations, those who work for state and local governments, and those who work for foreign governments.

The rules also require lobbyists to disclose their clients and to disclose the amount they charge for their services.

The rules are expected to take effect early next year and will likely be challenged by lobbyists and others who say they go too far.

The rules also include a provision that would bar any lobbyist from serving as a member of the House Ethics Committee, which has been criticized for being too cozy with the lobbying industry.

The rules are the latest in a series of efforts by Congress to rein in the lobbying industry, which has expanded in recent years as more lawmakers have sought to attract campaign contributions from the industry.

The new rules are expected to be approved by the House Ethics Committee next year and take effect in 2019.

"I think we have a lot of cooperation with the campus and community."

In addition to securing funding for the new program, the station also hopes to acquire a broadcasting license from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). In addition, there have been several successful projects aimed at bringing diverse content to the UCLA network.

The station, funded by Westwood One, is now being considered in order to determine how the license can be attained.

While the Communications Board was also concerned about the license issue, members have not been notified about the possibility for the radio station. However, members stated that the addition of a "radio college" would be particularly beneficial to students.

Indeed, a great deal of interest is expressed by the faculty within the usual academic institutions. One Communications Board chairman stated: "Despite our efforts, the faculty does not want to have to rely on outside funding for their projects, but the broadcast industry needs to work together to make the best of it."

"I think that the radio industry is the first to appreciate the importance of having these programs in place. Because of the funds, we can now reach a much wider audience, who have been registered for the last 15 years," he said.

There are some sections like "integrated radio" where they can be reached at the station in a more advanced manner. Thus, there would probably be more effective results for this program."

Excavating secrets of the Nile's history

LACMA's new exhibit features contributions of American researchers in revealing Egypt's past

By Dennis Price

Contrary to popular belief, not all of the ornamental art is in the only museum which has dedicated itself to the study of Egypt's past. Visitors to the American University in Cairo's new exhibit "The Nile's Story," can see for themselves the many objects and artifacts which are on display along the Nile.

"The American University in Cairo," a private university located on the outskirts of Cairo, is one of the oldest American universities in the Middle East. The campus is named after the Nile River, which flows along the border of Egypt.

Most of the artifacts are on display in the museum's main hall, which is also the site of the university's library. The museum contains a large collection of African, Egyptian, and Islamic art. The exhibits are divided by cultural and historical periods, with each section showcasing a different aspect of Egyptian life.

In addition to the permanent art collections, the museum also has a temporary exhibition space which rotates its exhibits every few months. The current exhibition, "The Nile's Story," features artifacts from the 4th to the 10th Dynasties, including pottery, jewelry, and statues.

The museum is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for students. The museum is located at 1399 West End Road, Cairo, Egypt. For more information, call (202) 373-6666.
Bhattacharya merges East and West within breed of guitar

By Mimi Yea

The guitarist is not the only one who needs a Persuasion.

Oindrila Bhattacharya, master of the Hindustani slide guitar, will perform this week at the John Street Theater. The guitar is a very popular instrument, worldwide, and in more countries. The modifications you may not notice may not improve the guitarist's own identity, says Bhattacharya.

The guitar is often compared to the lute of the Renaissance. The Indian classical guitar, the veena, is a long-necked, five-stringed stringed instrument that is tuned to the notes of the harmonic series. The guitarist is usually seated on a stool, with the guitar resting on his lap. The strings are plucked with the fingers of the right hand, while the left hand shapes the chords on the neck of the guitar. The rhythm and melody are played with the right hand, while the left hand shapes the chords on the neck of the guitar. The notes are often played with a bow, which is called a sitar in India.

Bhattacharya's approach to the guitar is unique. He incorporates elements of both the Hindustani and the Western classical music traditions. His style is characterized by a strong sense of rhythm and a smooth, melodic quality. He is known for his ability to blend the two musical traditions in his performances.

Mr. Bhattacharya's performance will be held at the John Street Theater on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Baseball salaries strike out

By Ronald Blum

The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- The average baseball salary went from $860,000 last year, the first full season without a salary cap, to $1,142,000 this year, according to figures provided to The Associated Press by the Major League Baseball Players Association. The union's annual survey of the majors is based on contracts in effect as of Dec. 31. The figures were not made available immediately by the union, but the players' association confirmed that the average salary in 1995 rose from $860,000 to $1,142,000. The union said the average salary for players with six or more years of major league service was $1,550,000, up from $1,292,000 last year. Monday’s loss to Chargers sends Raiders into tailspin

By Ken Peters

The Associated Press

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. – Despite improving to 4-1 and maintaining the AFC West lead, the Oakland Raiders lost 26-14 to the San Diego Chargers, their first loss to the Chargers since the 1992 season.

With the loss, the Raiders fall to 2-7 on the season and will face the Houston Texans next week in a key game for playoff position.

In the loss, quarterback Derek Carr was 26 of 38 for 278 yards and two touchdowns, but also threw three interceptions.

The Raiders scored the first 14 points of the game, but San Diego rallied with 22 unanswered points to secure the win.

In the fourth quarter, the Raiders faced fourth down and long at their own 20-yard line. Carr threw a pass that was intercepted by Chargers safety Derwin James.

Carr said he will bounce back from the loss and continue to work on improving his game.

The Oakland Raiders face the Houston Texans next week in a crucial game for both teams. A victory would give the Raiders control of the AFC West, while a loss would keep them in second place, a half-game behind the Denver Broncos.

Wildcats

Wildcats head coach Bill talked about the importance of continuing to improve.

The Wildcats will face a tough test next week when they travel to play the top-ranked team in the nation, the No. 2 team in the country.

Swimming world enforces heavy crackdown on drug use

By Todd Lowen
The Associated Press

Balancing the nation's drug laws with the international Olympics, the FINA has taken a positive step toward bringing a leader against doping.

But FINA rejected or postponed action on some of the most difficult cases, including several drug violations involving world champions who were not prosecute.

For example, the FINA released a statement that it would not pursue charges against three swimmers from Switzerland, Australia and the United States who were implicated in a drug scandal.

The statement said that FINA was looking into the cases and would not take action unless there was clear evidence of wrongdoing.

In a separate statement, FINA said it would not impose any sanctions on three other swimmers who were involved in similar cases.

The FINA also said it would not impose any sanctions on a third swimmer who tested positive for a banned substance but had not admitted to using it.

This is a step in the right direction, said FINA President Julio Maglione.

But it is also a reminder that the FINA still has work to do to ensure that doping is not tolerated in the sport.

This is why FINA needs to be more aggressive in its efforts to combat doping, said Thomas de Gans, the president of the International Olympic Committee.

The IOC has repeatedly called for FINA to be more proactive in enforcing its anti-doping rules.

The FINA has been told repeatedly that it needs to do more to ensure that its anti-doping program is effective.

This is why the IOC is thrilled to see FINA taking steps to address doping, said de Gans.

It is important for FINA to set an example and show that it is committed to ensuring a level playing field for swimmers around the world.

We look forward to working with FINA to make sure that its anti-doping program is as strong as it can be.

It is also important for FINA to be transparent and to make sure that its anti-doping policies are being enforced fairly.

This is why the IOC is happy to see FINA taking steps to address these issues.

We look forward to working with FINA to make sure that it is doing everything it can to ensure a clean sport for all.

Northwestern students finally smell the roses

The Wildcats are No. 1 in the Associated Press Top 25 poll, which was released Monday.

Bruins rise to occasion

Men's hoops defeats Fullerton, 79-65, in season-home opener

By Scott Harmata
Daily Bruin Staff

Four baskets in 34 seconds of the second half really spelled the Fullerton demise. With 3:45 left in the game, UCLA, behind a 6-0 run from the bench, had grabbed a 63-56 lead.

The Bruins (11-2, 3-0 Pac-10) are tied for the Pac-10 lead with Arizona and Stanford, for the second straight year. The Bruins are the only team in the Pac-10 with a winning conference record.

Lute Olson's team has been hot, winning its last six games.

"We started off cold, but we came back," Olson said. "We made some shots and were able to push the ball. We're going to have to play defense to win in this league. We have to make sure we play well on defense to have a chance to win."

The Tigers (5-9, 0-3 Pac-10) are last in the conference and have lost their last three games.

The Bruins did it again, as they have all year. With three seconds remaining, they sank a free throw to tie the game at 63-63. With the ball out of bounds, the Bruins won the inbound pass and scored on a layup for the 65-63 lead.

The Bruins, two games away from an NCAA title, face San Diego next

By Yoni Tumarkin

Perhaps the most important game of the season so far is set for Wednesday night when the Bruins (11-2, 3-0 Pac-10) face San Diego (16-3, 0-3 Pac-10) at the Sports Arena.

The game will determine who finishes in first place in the conference and who gets the No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament.

"This is a must-win game," said Coach Denny Crum. "If we win, we'll be in the hunt for the conference title. If we lose, we'll be out of the hunt.

"We have to play well on defense and make sure we make our free throws."

The Bruins are coming off a 79-63 win over Fullerton on Tuesday night and are confident they can win the game.

"We're playing well right now," said senior forward Ryan Scott. "We're playing together and making the right decisions on the court.

"We're looking forward to this game."

San Diego is coming off a 79-63 loss to Arizona on Tuesday night. The Aztecs are off to a slow start in the conference and will be looking to get back on track.

"We need to play better on defense," said Aztec guard Tim Reynolds. "We need to make sure we make our free throws and rebound better.

"We're looking forward to this game."

The game will be an important one for both teams, and the winner will likely have a leg up in the race for the conference title.

"This is a big game for us," said Bruins guard John O'Bannon. "We want to win this game and keep our momentum going.
BLOOD TIES OF MARROW DONATION

Transfusion marks first time a bone marrow recipient becomes a donor

By John Deighan

Daily Bruin Staff

This fall, 11-year-old Paulina Aguilar learned that her sister, Teresa, would need a bone marrow transplant to help address the genetic disorder that killed their older sister, Rachel. Her family had already lost two other family members to the rare disease SCID (Severe Combined Immune Deficiency) syndrome.

The Aguilar family has been through a series of tragedies that have left them heartbroken. Their daughter, Rachel, was diagnosed with SCID in 2001. Her organs failed, and she died on July 15, 2006, at UCLA Medical Center.

Now, with Teresa's condition worsening, the Aguilar family is looking to the future with hope and determination. Their journey has been both physically and emotionally challenging, but they remain steadfast in their quest to find a cure for SCID.

Families of SCID patients often face a daunting task of raising funds for medical treatments and research. The Aguilar family has been actively involved in organizing events and fundraising initiatives to support research and awareness efforts.

To the Aguilar family, every donation counts. They encourage others to join in their fight against SCID and support initiatives that aim to find a cure for this rare genetic disorder.
Students share sleepwalking tales

By Susan Lee

When Rebecca Rees woke up one night, she found herself sitting on the edge instead of in bed. Rees, then 15, discovered that she had sleepwalked across the floor of her home. As she searched for her keys, she thought she might be able to get them before she fell asleep. But as soon as she realized what was happening, she stopped for a moment and then thought, "I've heard from my friends that they can't sleepwalk." At that point, she realized that she was not dreaming, but that she was actually sleepwalking.

Rees's experience is not uncommon. Sleepwalking, or somnambulism, is a common occurrence, with an estimated 15% of adults experiencing it at least once in their lifetime. Most sleepwalkers are between the ages of 10 and 30, and the disorder is more common in males than in females.

Sue Harris, a clinical psychologist at UCLA, explains that sleepwalking is a result of the brain's attempt to process information during sleep. "Sleepwalking is a complex process that involves the interaction of various brain regions during sleep," Harris says. "It is not a simple disorder, but rather a complex phenomenon that involves a variety of factors, including genetics, environmental factors, and lifestyle.

Sleepwalking can also be triggered by sleep deprivation, stress, and certain medications. It is also more common in children and young adults who have difficulty transitioning from one stage of sleep to another.

While sleepwalking is a complex disorder, it is also relatively safe. Most sleepwalkers do not fall from windows or suffer serious injuries. However, it is important to monitor sleepwalkers for any potential danger, such as the risk of injury or getting lost while sleeping.

Sleepwalking can be managed with a combination of lifestyle changes and medical treatment. Lifestyle changes may include improving sleep habits, limiting caffeine and alcohol intake, and reducing stress. Medical treatment may include medications, therapy, or other interventions, depending on the individual's needs.

Overall, sleepwalking is a relatively common disorder that can be managed with proper care and attention. While it can be concerning for those who experience it, it is important to remember that sleepwalking is a natural and complex process that involves a variety of factors.

White House, GOP agree on ground rules for budget talks

By Jerry Gray

The New York Times

WASHINGTON — White House and congressional negotiators agreed Wednesday on the framework for final talks on a two-year balanced-budget plan. A key in the negotiations, the White House agreed to have the framework in place by Thursday, as it aims to have a budget deal by the end of the week. Despite the lack of movement on the key issues, the negotiators said they hoped to make progress in the coming days.

Republican negotiators, led by House Budget Committee Chairman Rep. Mike Pence, R-Ind., and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., have been working on a budget plan that would cut $61.3 billion from the current budget and $68.4 billion from the next year’s budget. The plan would include cuts to Medicare, Medicaid, and other entitlement programs, as well as to discretionary spending.

However, the parties have not agreed on how to handle the issue of debt ceiling and the government shutdown. The leaders have said they want to avoid a government shutdown, but they have not agreed on a strategy to deal with the debt ceiling.

Democrats have insisted on an increase in the debt ceiling and the end of the government shutdown as conditions for agreeing to the budget plan. Republicans have said they will not agree to any conditions on the budget talks.

The negotiators said they hope to have the framework in place by Thursday, but they have not agreed on a specific timeline for the final talks. The leaders have said they will continue to work on the budget plan, and they hope to have a deal by the end of the week.

The budget talks come as the country faces a possible government shutdown and a debt ceiling crisis. The government is set to run out of funds on Oct. 1, and the nation is on track to reach its debt limit on Oct. 17.

The negotiators said they hope to have a deal by the end of the week, but they have not agreed on a specific timeline for the final talks. The leaders have said they will continue to work on the budget plan, and they hope to have a deal by the end of the week.
Pat Schroeder, long-time Colorado congresswoman, to retire

By Michael Wiese
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., who confronted sexism against military spending cuts in 1985, has decided to retire from Congress at the end of the 108th Congress. She shocked colleagues with word Tuesday that she will not seek another term.

Schroeder, a 20-year veteran of Congress, said on the House floor that she will not run for a 12th term in next year’s election, although she would allow her name to stay on the November ballot.

Schroeder, 65, who is the longest-serving female member of Congress, is one of a new breed of liberal who doesn’t feel constrained by ideology.

“Politics is about people, and I feel as though people are losing faith in it,” Schroeder said. “I have been unequivocally in favor of creating jobs and protecting the environment, and I feel like I’m doing those things now.”

Schroeder said she was thinking about retirement, but had not decided until recently. She said she would like to have some time to spend with her husband, former Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm, and their children.

“Politics is about people, and I feel as though people are losing faith in it,” Schroeder said. “I have been unequivocally in favor of creating jobs and protecting the environment, and I feel like I’m doing those things now.”

Schroeder, a Democrat, has represented Colorado’s 7th District since 1981. She is the only Colorado woman ever to hold a House leadership position, including the chairmanship of the Education and Labor Committee.

According to Dr. Galer, the manager of Cache City’s office, patients are on the rise for this illness.

A SLEEPWALKING is a condition in which a person awakens during sleep and is able to perform physical activities. The disorder can occur at any age, but is most common in children and young adults. It is estimated that 1 in 25 people experience SLEEPWALKING at least once in their lifetime. Some people may experience SLEEPWALKING only a few times a year, while others may experience it several times a week. The disorder can also be associated with other conditions, such as sleep apnea, and can be a symptom of a more serious underlying medical condition.

Higher minimum wage advocate is off ‘Mark’

By Jean Bali

The thorn in the side of Viewpoint columnist Mark Slatt is the minimum wage. The views are his own, and he does not necessarily reflect those of the Daily Brains Viewpoint page editor or the Daily Brains staff.

Slatt would probably argue that the minimum wage would result in higher prices for the millions who make it. He would argue that the minimum wage is a political tool for unions that want to increase their power, and that it would force businesses to raise prices, leading to higher costs for consumers.

However, I believe that the minimum wage is a necessary tool for ensuring that workers are paid a living wage. The minimum wage is not just about helping workers, but also about helping consumers. When workers are paid a living wage, they are more likely to spend their money on products and services, which helps businesses stay afloat and grow.

In addition, the minimum wage has the potential to reduce poverty. When workers are paid a living wage, they are less likely to rely on government assistance to make ends meet. This can help reduce the number of people living in poverty and improve the overall quality of life.

In conclusion, I believe that the minimum wage is a necessary tool for ensuring that workers are paid a living wage and that it has the potential to reduce poverty. While there may be some who argue that the minimum wage is a political tool for unions, I believe that the benefits of the minimum wage outweigh the costs.

Deceptive information about AIDS breeds false hopes

By Joseph Smith

The Daily Brains Viewpoint page editor, Mark Slatt, has been criticized for his recent column on the minimum wage. In the column, Slatt argues that raising the minimum wage would lead to higher prices for consumers and that it would hurt businesses.

However, I believe that Slatt’s views are wrong. Raising the minimum wage is a necessary step towards ensuring that workers are paid a living wage. It is unfair to expect workers to earn less than the cost of living, and it is harmful to the economy as a whole.

In addition, there is strong evidence that raising the minimum wage has positive economic effects. A study by the Economic Policy Institute found that raising the minimum wage can lead to higher wages for workers, increased productivity, and reduced poverty.

In conclusion, I believe that raising the minimum wage is a necessary step towards ensuring that workers are paid a living wage. It is unfair to expect workers to earn less than the cost of living, and it is harmful to the economy as a whole. Slatt’s views are wrong and I hope that he will reconsider his stance on the minimum wage.
Because all-nighters aren't always spent in the library.

while sticking to the minimum wage is important, many studies have identified differences in job performance and satisfaction among full-time and part-time workers. In fact, the 10 most common causes of homelessness in the United States are housing-related problems, and the greatest proportion of these is related to rent or mortgage payments. Housing is the most basic need for a human, yet this big government cannot provide the only answer to homelessness.

Many would argue that our current low-income housing programs are not effective. If housing is the primary cause of homelessness, then our efforts must focus on creating more affordable housing opportunities. The government has a role to play in this, but the problem is much larger than what the government alone can solve.

The government cannot solve every problem. While the entire issue is difficult, part of it is creating a society where people are encouraged to take personal responsibility for themselves and their families. The government can play a role in this, but the responsibility also lies with the individuals themselves to overcome their own obstacles and make positive changes. While the government can provide resources and support, it is ultimately up to each individual to make the effort to help themselves and achieve a better future.

not only willing to give up their personal space, but also the damage it may cause to their communities, and that is why this government is so strong and so strong in its beliefs. In other cases, we can see that the government is doing its best to keep things as simple and as easy as possible. The government is not afraid of making hard decisions, because it is not afraid of the consequences. The government has been able to do the right thing throughout its history, and it has been able to do it because of the strength and dedication of its people. The government is doing its best to make sure that the people of this country are treated fairly and with respect.

Devil comes through, delivering masterful 'Damy Inceens'

Jerry Lewis allowed free rein as centerpiece of dynamic musical.

By Jennifer Richardson  Daily Bruner Staff

Surely, great, indulgent preparatory, subtle ingredient, body lines, and warm songs are the ingredients for a great musical.

Theater "West Side Story" is exactly that.

Revolving around a baseball bat held by the White Sox’s Piniella, "West Side Story" is sure to be a modern hit with the devil help the signature tune to win the pretense.

While this production has perfect choreography, the audience really makes this show show the material is there. There isn’t one moment where the audience production is not there. Everyone is engaged, and each moment keeps the crowd hyped up. As they are at the edge of their seat, the show is at its peak and the audience is very pleased.

The one person who breaks this rhythm is Jerry Lewis. He plays Applegate (the devil) with class and style, but there is one thing he is not the best at. This show is simply a vehicle for an actor providing the classic Jerry Lewis performance.

When he’s character as Applegate, he not only proves that he is no longer improving the character, but when he’s character, and especially in the crowd-pleasing row of something that is not. And when he’s not Applegate, he falls back into his old ways. The audience is better off not hearing any more of his take on the role.

"West Side Story" is a musical that is a true taste of what’s come. It is a musical that will be enjoyed by all, old and young, and is a true classic in its own right. The music is great, the acting is great, and the story is great. It is a musical that will be enjoyed by all, and it is a true classic in its own right.

Youthful jazz talent, quintet to delight audiences at Wadsworth this Saturday

By Alyson Harwood

It’s rare that members of the UCLA community get an opportunity to see jazz performances regularly. But this Saturday, Dec. 2, Roy Hargrove and his quintet will perform at the Veteran Wadsworth Theater.

Hargrove is scheduled to perform for one hour, but this may vary. Expect the performing to start around 8:15 p.m. and to end around 9:15 p.m. According to the box office, the event will fill up quickly, so get into the room where I’m going to play. I figure we’ll see how many people can fit in the club.

Hargrove, who is a Jazz studies major at UCLA, has four albums under his belt. The last album was released in 2012, and his most recent album is titled “Soul Sessions.”

The club will be open by 7:45 p.m. for dinner and drinks. The menu includes dinner specials for $10 and a full bar.

Hargrove grew up in Dallas, and at the age of four, the musical interest was sparked. When he was five, his parents introduced him to a toy saxophone.

The quintet will play his original tunes, including a tune he wrote for his father’s birthday called “Father’s Day.”

Hargrove began playing the saxophone at a young age. When he was 14, he joined a local band and began playing at local clubs.

He quickly became part of a band, playing at a variety of venues around the city. His father purchased a saxophone at a pawn shop and played for a hobby. Hargrove had originally wanted to play the drum, Hargrove’s father encouraged him to try out for the saxophone, and he decided to give it a try. It made sense for him to play the saxophone he had learned to play, as he enjoyed it more than the drums.

Hargrove has been described as a “rising star” by many critics. His talent has been recognized by many prominent musicians, including Wynton Marsalis, who is a member of the jazz band. Hargrove has also performed with many other artists, including Wayne Shorty, who is a member of the band.

Hargrove’s quintet consists of five musicians, who will play for one hour. The group includes a saxophone, guitar, bass, drums, and piano.

The show will be held at the Veteran Wadsworth Theater, starting at 8:15 p.m. Doors open at 7:45 p.m. for dinner and drinks. Tickets are $10 for dinner specials and $20 for the show.

New Kereholf exhibit allows talent of disabled students to speak for itself

By Judy Hui

Pacific Standard, Todd's, dazzling, charming, accomplished, Kereholf Art Gallery's current exhibit "The Search" provides a welcome escape for weary eyes and minds during a hectic time of year. The Gallery is a project of the UCLA Cultural Affairs Commission and the Office of Business with Disabilities to display various art forms of disabled students in honor of Disability Awareness Month. Since 1987, the show has been an annual event. All of the paintings featured are by students at UCLA. The exhibition provides an opportunity for visitors to see a wide range of art styles and subject matter created by students with various disabilities.

"The purpose is to remove social barriers and for people to be aware of different aspects of talent associated with disabilities," says Linda Hecht, assistant director at the Office for Students with Disabilities. "People with disabilities on the other hand, feel they are being seen and appreciated. The Gallery is an opportunity for these students to show how they see the world.

"The theme is how to keep with the exhibit's title, "The Search," by John Mather, depicts a figure of hands and legs with blue and red. A collection of art, this image is a reflection of the search for a complete vision that has been described as a "living vision."" The picture is one of the many pieces that make up this show.

"Over the past three years, what has been the most exciting piece is the work done by students with disabilities. It seems that people with disabilities are often overwhelmed by the pressures of their disabilities. The Gallery offers a way to share this excitement with people who may not feel comfortable talking about their disabilities," says Mather. "These students offer their talents and possibly feel more comfortable sharing their art than their disabilities."

The Gallery's main goal is to give disabled students an opportunity to display their art and enjoy it. Regardless of any physical or mental limitations, these students can still create something out of their ideas."

The show is open to the public and will be on display through Dec. 31.

The song was inspired by the death of a popular radio broadcaster in England.

"When he died, all these politicians came on and said wonderful things. That’s called a eulogy before they start thinking."

"It was wonderful before," Barry said. "I understand they’re going to rebroadcast all the shows."

"That’s great," Barry agreed. "I heard it on the radio on the radio."

Economics stealing fantasy of sports from fans

Super agent Leigh Steinberg discusses sports' present state

By ChristopherNorth

Daily Brains

As a benchmark for the student athlete's earning potential, the annual salary of at least $1 million, or $10 million, is commonly seen in the professional sports industry. The numbers are astronomical and continue to grow, reflecting the ever-expanding role of sports in society.

The student was Steve Barkovich, who signed a six-year deal with the Chicago Bears in 1989. The deal was worth $20 million, making him the highest-paid player in the NFL at the time. The agreement was a milestone in the evolution of college football, as it set a new standard for the value of an athlete's talent.

But the story of Steve Barkovich is not unique. Many other student athletes have signed contracts that make headlines, but few understand the complexities of these deals. The student athlete is often faced with a dilemma: on one hand, the opportunity to play at a high level in a professional sport; on the other hand, the risk of injury and the uncertain future that comes with it.

The student athlete must also consider the financial aspects of these deals. The income from these contracts can be lucrative, but it can also be risky. The athlete must balance the short-term gains with the long-term implications of their decisions.
Polo revisits past in NCAI title game

By Esther Ha
Daily Bruin Staff

It is not every day that a team can revisit a championship that is 16 years old. But that was the case for the UCLA polo team, which won the National Collegiate Athletic Association polo title in 1995 and was able to travel to Chaska, Minn., to participate in the championship game again this year.

A total of 20 players from the UCLA polo team, including head coach Kylie Olson, were reunited recently to participate in the championship game. The team, which was the defending champion, was able to win the title again, this time by a score of 3-1.

The team was able to repeat as champions, despite the fact that they were not able to qualify for the tournament last year. The team was able to qualify this year, however, and were able to defend their title.

The UCLA polo team is known for their offensive capabilities, and they were able to put up a good fight against their opponents. The team was able to score three goals in the first half of the game, and were able to hold on to their lead in the second half.

The championship game was held at the UCLA Polo Club in Chaska, Minn., and was attended by a large crowd of supporters. The team was able to celebrate their victory with their families and friends, as well as with the fans who came to support them.

The UCLA polo team has been a successful team over the years, and has been able to win many championships. They are looking forward to continuing their success in the future, and hope to be able to bring home more titles in the years to come.

Students challenge university's e-mail policy

By Jean May Chen

The University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) has recently proposed a new e-mail policy that has sparked considerable controversy among students, faculty, and staff. The policy, which is expected to be implemented in the near future, requires all users to use a centralized e-mail system, rather than the personal e-mail accounts that have traditionally been used.

With the exponential growth of e-mail usage over the past decade, concern has arisen about the impact of this type of communication on the university community. UCLA is not alone in its efforts to address this issue. Many other institutions are also considering similar policies to manage their e-mail traffic and to ensure that all users have equal access to certain types of information.

Some of the main arguments against the policy include the increase in volume of spam and viruses, the potential loss of personal identity, and the difficulty in accessing the e-mail archives.

Researchers collaborate on geotechnical database

Earthquake damage related to types of soil under buildings

By Anika Johnson

When most UCLA students hear about UC, they think of its various academic and extracurricular programs. However, the university is also home to a number of ongoing projects that do not fall under the usual categories.

For example, researchers on both coasts are now working on a geotechnical database which will allow them to assess earthquake damage according to the soil type in the building during an earthquake.

A super-secret militant organization kidnaps and deprograms African-Americans who have sold out!!

On December 1, UCLA will observe the day without art. A program which runs in conjunction with world AIDS Day.

The day without art is an annual event that is held to raise awareness about the global AIDS epidemic and to support those affected by the disease. The event is organized by the UCLA AIDS Institute and the university community.

The day without art is a way for individuals and institutions to show their commitment to the fight against AIDS and to demonstrate their support for those living with the disease. It is a day of action, awareness, and solidarity.

During the day without art, UCLA will host various events and activities, including a silent auction, a performance by the UCLA Philharmonic Orchestra, and a screening of the film "Drop Squad." The day will also include educational workshops, panels, and discussions on the importance of HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment.

The day without art is an opportunity for individuals to come together and take action against the epidemic. It is a day to remember those who have lost their lives to AIDS and to honor the courage and strength of those who continue to fight the disease.

But for many, the day without art is more than just a day of awareness. It is a day of celebration, a day to come together and remember those who have been lost to AIDS. It is a day to celebrate the lives of those who have fought the disease and to honor the memory of those who have passed.

The day without art is a day of hope, a day to remember that despite the challenges of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, there is still hope for a cure.

The day without art is a day to remember that the fight against AIDS is far from over, and that every person has a role to play in the global effort to combat the disease.

The day without art is a day to remember that, despite the challenges of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, hope is still alive.
NATO works Bosnian deployment blueprint

BRUSSELS, Belgium — NATO ambassadors ended a three-day meeting Thursday without deciding how to launch the first 3,000 of the 50,000 troops slated for an enlarged peacekeeping mission.

The North Atlantic Council, NATO's top policymaking body, was to reconvene Friday to review decisions on the unauthorized deployment and to decide whether to extend the 30-day grace period.

The American delegation said it would not proceed with deployment until the documents and capital were purchased, delaying approval.

The advance units— including about 100 Americans — were scheduled to spread to Bosnian areas under U.S. command in the next few days. The decision will test NATO's ability to move troops to war-torn areas.

West Bank violence leaves 17 wounded

NABLUS, West Bank — Violence erupted in the West Bank Thursday, raising fears of possible delays in the planned expansion of Palestinian autonomy.

Six Palestinians were killed and 16 others were injured in clashes with Israeli soldiers in the West Bank city of Nablus. Israeli security forces fired tear gas and rubber-coated steel bullets into the crowd, shattering windows and causing minor injuries.

Rebels pound Afghan capital, 16 dead

KABUL, Afghanistan — Rebels fired a deadly rocket attack on the Afghan capital Thursday, killing 16 people and wounding at least 25, authorities said.

The government blamed the attack on the Taliban, who have repeatedly targeted Kabul's diplomatic missions, including the U.S. Embassy, and the American military base.

Bosnia cost predicted to run over $2 billion

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is predicting that the U.S. deployment to Bosnia will cost $2 billion and said the mission will require 12,000 American troops and $3 billion in military aid.

The administration has come under criticism for the cost of the mission, which is estimated to run $17 billion.

UCI fertility doctor hits jackpot in Chile

A U.S. fertility doctor who helped a woman in Chile have a baby after six years of trying has been awarded a $4 million settlement.

The case, which drew international attention, involved a patient in Chile who was treated by Dr. John Conroy, a U.S. doctor who performed in vitro fertilization for patients in the U.S.

University of California, Irvine, fired Conroy in 1996 after he refused to perform the procedure for a woman in the U.S.

By Henry Hui

When I was in middle school, I would wake up at 5:30 a.m. to ride my bike to school. I was the only kid in the neighborhood who rode a bike. It was a long ride, about 30 minutes, but I enjoyed it. I loved the feeling of freedom, the wind in my hair, the sun on my face. It was a way to escape the realities of school and the pressures of life. I was passionate about my bike, and I treated it like a friend. It was my way of escape.

But as I grew older, I realized that bike riding was not just a personal hobby, but a political statement. The city was not bike-friendly, and biking was not safe. There were potholes, hills, and traffic. It was a struggle to get to school, and I often felt alone. I was not the only one who felt this way. I heard stories from other bikers, and I saw the frustration on their faces. It was clear that something needed to be done.

So, I joined the Bike Coalition of Los Angeles. It was a group of people who were passionate about bike riding and wanted to make it safer. We held meetings, rode together, and planned events. We fought for our rights, and we were not alone. We had a community that supported us.

But it was not easy. We faced opposition from the city government, who were more concerned about cars than bikes. They ignored our pleas, and they were not interested in our safety. It was a battle, but we were determined. We were not going to give up.

Finally, in 2010, we won. The city voted to build bike lanes, and the streets became safer. It was a huge victory, and it made a difference. I was proud to be a part of this movement.

Now, I am a bike activist. I want to make sure that everyone has the same opportunity to ride a bike. I want to make the streets safe for all. I am not alone. I have a community of bikers who support me, and I am not going to give up. Bicyclists unite!
Spotty ‘Denver’ omelette contains shards of brilliance

Romance, violence in gangster film fail to come together

By Clifford Tseung

Romance is an anachronism in the gangster film. What’s a mob movie without love? But what happens when you remove romance from the genre? Actors portray violent, zero-sum struggle for power and control. The film’s world is one where emotions are reduced to calculated moves and strategic alliances. The once-endearing Bromance between a film’s protagonist and his mentor is replaced by a cold, calculation-driven relationship. The traditional romantic storyline is replaced by a story of power and control.

With its top-notch cast and sparkling bits of dialogue, “Denver” achieves moments of greatness.

Unfortunately, several brilliant scenes arecdfeeded into the narrative, making the movie feel disjointed.

Intertwining hypothesis overshadowed by bad direction and acting

By Lloyd E. Davenport

“What’s in a Name?” is not only a film that presents an intriguing hypothesis; it also explores the role of identity and the importance of individuality in society. However, the film’s direction leaves much to be desired.

The film’s premise is an interesting one. It explores the idea that our names are not just what society gives us, but are a reflection of our inner selves. This is a powerful concept, but the execution falls short.

The script is well-written, and the performances are strong. However, the direction is weak. The film lacks a clear vision and seems to meander from scene to scene without a cohesive narrative.

In conclusion, “What’s in a Name?” is a film that has potential, but its execution falls short. The premise is intriguing, but the direction is lacking. It’s a shame, but the film’s direction is not up to the standards of its script and performances.

"Mouse of Beach Terrace and Camp! It's a poetic gesture..."

"Trepak," from the ballet "The Nutcracker."

His "Wisteria." He's also a poet.

"Mom, please don't go..."

"the moment of poetic genius."

"...but it's a poetic moment."

"Time is of the essence..."

"We're going to find that..."

The Associated Press
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — An NCAA sanctions panel is expected to meet with Alabama officials Thursday to address the possibility of a major fine against the school for a rules violation that cost the team a victory over Florida.

The sanctions could range from a fine up to $10 million or even more severe action such as取消 a season or a bowl game appearance, according to a source close to the situation.

Alabama's suspension of on-campus activities for the football team was announced Tuesday after the NCAA released its report on its investigation into the team's violations.

The NCAA said in the report that Alabama violated rules related to the use of improper influence in recruiting, improper benefit programs and impermissible payments to players and their families.

Alabama AD Greg Byrne, who was not available to speak, did not comment on the expected sanctions meeting.

Byrne and other university officials have said they will cooperate with the NCAA and its investigation.

Alabama head coach Nick Saban has also been placed on probation for three years.

The NCAA is expected to announce the sanctions at a later date.

Saro-Wiwa tribute focuses attention on plight of the Ogoni

By Michael Angelii

A crowd of 200,000, including students and faculty, gathered outside the UCLA Bruin Fitness Center to pay respects to Ken Saro-Wiwa. The body was erected in the center for people to mourn Saro-Wiwa, one of the most important figures in the Ogoni indigenous community, and to remember the 30 years of work he devoted to the cause of indigenous people.

Saro-Wiwa was a Nigerian activist who served as the president of the Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People (MOSOP). He was shot by local police on November 10, 1995, after he was convicted of rape and murder and sentenced to death.

In addition to being a leader, Saro-Wiwa was also a writer who wrote several books and articles about the plight of indigenous people in Nigeria. He was a member of the Nigerian government and worked to bring about social and economic change in his community.

The gathering was organized by the students of the UCLA African Studies Department and the Center for the Study of Ethnicity and Race. The event was attended by President James D. H. Freeborn, who said, “Today we honor the memory of Ken Saro-Wiwa, a leader who fought for the rights of the indigenous people of Nigeria.”

Saro-Wiwa was a symbol of courage and determination, and his work continues to inspire people around the world. His legacy will be remembered for many years to come.

This event was part of a series of tributes to Saro-Wiwa, who was posthumously awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 2015. His work has had a profound impact on the lives of indigenous people in Nigeria, and his legacy will continue to be felt for generations to come.
Rabin's assassin says guard assisted him

TEL AVIV, Israel — Yitzhak Rabin's commanded guard said Sunday that one of the Rivonia treason trial's Buchenwald defendants who were involved in the assassination of former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin had assisted him in the murder.

The guard, who was not identified, said in a statement that he had been commanded by Yitzhak Rabin's bodyguard, who had also been involved in the assassination.

The guard said that he had been commanded to take Rabin's body to the site where he was killed and that he had been commanded to assist in the murder.

Rabin's assassin, who is serving a life sentence for the murder, was also known as the "Buchenwald killer" due to his involvement in the Holocaust.

The guard's statements come as the Israeli government prepares to hold a memorial service for Rabin on the 25th anniversary of his assassination.

Campaign debts hurt Wilson tax-cut effort

Gov. Pete Wilson's campaign debt especially could pay off if plans to phase out a tax incentive that provides a credit for employers who hire veterans.

Wilson, a Republican, has said that the tax credit would help Veterans Affairs.

Wilson's campaign debt is estimated to be around $50,000, and he has recently said that he would like to reduce it to $10,000.

Clintón dispatches first 700 U.S. troops to Bosnia

By Teresa Hunt

The Associated Press

MAIDOS, Spain — President Clinton authorized a vanguard of U.S. troops Thursday to join a risky mission in former Yugoslavia and urged Bosnian Serb rebels to declare an end to the civil war that has left 250,000 of their countrymen dead.

Clinton said his decision was based on a new assessment that the Bosnian situation is at a critical point. A major test will be whether Serbs heed his call to halt the fighting.

The U.S. mission, a peacekeeping force of about 700 troops, is intended to complement the NATO operation and help set the stage for a peace conference in Paris in early May.

In Washington, Clinton said the new operation will be a crucial step toward peace in Bosnia.

"I believe we have the right to be here," Clinton told reporters in the Oval Office. "I think we can make a significant contribution to the peace process."...

In the coming days, Clinton said, "we must work with the Serbs, popularly known as Muslims, to try to make sure they do not become blood and Khmer Rouge dictates."...

Clinton said the United States is prepared to extend its peacekeeping mission "as long as we think it's necessary."...
Tax credit for children evokes jealousy from children's parents

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Most parents have no chance to claim any exemptions, being single.

More than 25 million households will get the credit, in effect shifting some of the existing tax burden onto childless couples or single parents. The National Commission on Economic Growth and Tax Reform, headed by former Housing Secretary Jack Kemp, last week warned that the program could add $27 billion to the budget deficit by 1996.

"This is more than the major taxpayer's bill," Kemp said. "It's the real difference between the administration and Congress. But, whatever the outcome, no one will be happy in the long run.

The Social Science Research Council, one of the organizations that supported the bill, said it would not be enough to save the program.

"This will be a big issue in the next election," the council said. "We should be prepared to fight hard for it."

SEX TALK

It might not ordinarily take, some men find it more difficult to get erections and men may have trouble getting erections.

A man may have more difficulty getting an erection if he has been recently under a lot of stress. He may be so tense that he just can't relax and maybe they like it at last a little less.

This is a problem for some men in their college years, but sometimes it occurs because the man has not learned enough about the body's normal sexual response. Some may have been taught that thinking about other things during sex, like basketball, can relieve sexual tension. If so, perhaps a visit to a sex therapist is in order. This technique can ultimately lead to frustration and guilt.

A better approach is to use the sexual positive thought projecting of giving sex a second chance to help men deal with this very common difficulty.

The trouble is, to have sex is one of the most common sexual concerns among women in their 20's. It's common for several reasons.

First, in order to have sex, she must have a positive attitude towards herself, her body, and her sexual response, and many women are not. Second, women may feel guilty about enjoying sex, especially the experience of one or more of the benefits of sex, in particular orgasm.

The good news is that even if it is a struggle to have orgasm, therapists have been trained to help women deal with this common difficulty.

The theory has it, just the fact of being a woman is not necessarily a problem. What's more important is that the woman feels good about herself, her body, and how she responds to sexual stimulation. Sexual information is readily available through a variety of easy-to-read resources.

Despite risks, U.S. intervention necessary

and in other hot spots, too

The formidable U.S. troops will arrive in Bosnia today, establishing communication and logistics for the 30,000 combat troops who will soon follow them into the troubled region. While national support for American involvement may be uncertain, the Daily Bruin agrees with the purpose and goals of the mission.

American troops have been deployed to protect the human rights of Bosnians, to enforce the Dayton peace agreement, and to boost the peace process. To do this, the United States and its allies should be on the ground in Bosnia, not just off the ground in the region.

For Bosnia, and perhaps in the peace process, the end is near. The Dayton peace agreement, which includes the creation of a federal government, is under threat. The Dayton accord, which would have provided a stable political framework, is under threat. The United Nations and its allies should be on the ground in Bosnia, not just off the ground in the region.

The style of warfare in the region is characterized by the use of large, attacking formations. These formations are often well-organized and well-equipped, and they can be very effective. The United Nations and its allies should be on the ground in Bosnia, not just off the ground in the region.

Thursday is, like the title suggests, a family comedy and is being self-effacingly played by American Family man and TV icon, Ted Danson. It is the story of the American President and a "Boy Story," as in the two billion dollars of the holiday season is spent promoting two billion dollars worth of new family comedies. The result is a high Hollywood gloss, a standard formula of wacky family antics, and some well-timed punch lines. It's a good time, but it's also a bit predictable. The result is a film that will appeal to a broad audience but is likely to be forgotten quickly.

As "The American President" reflects our unsatisfactory churn of warmed-over juvenile fare, so "Boy Story" is a film with a vengeance. It is the story of a young man who is determined to prove to the world that he can function on his own, despite the fact that he is a member of the American family. The result is a film that is both thrilling and inspiring. It is a story of hope and promise, and it will leave you feeling uplifted and inspired.

long as you like, the leisurely pace of Temples in America and it's more than likely they'd be willing to work for a smaller salary. As "The American President" reflects our unsatisfactory churn of warmed-over juvenile fare, so "Boy Story" is a film with a vengeance. It is the story of a young man who is determined to prove to the world that he can function on his own, despite the fact that he is a member of the American family. The result is a film that is both thrilling and inspiring. It is a story of hope and promise, and it will leave you feeling uplifted and inspired.

Green Day's Armstrong holds fast to his roots

By John Sabatini

After two years of MTV and radio domination, few people anymore in the world look at the band members themselves. Having created the Bay Area underground punk scene for five years, the possibility of band members is the refrain that no punk band could achieve mass success.

When it turned out, I didn't quite do anything, because it had already been proven that only punk rock could give me a sense of freedom, I say winch.

Suckers for Armstrong's stories.

One success was the band's first album, which had already been released.

Although unprofitable, the band's popularity is hard to miss the first time around.

The Green Day have written some of the most popular songs ever, from the debut album of the band's first release, "Dookie," to the first album, "Good Riddance (Time of My Life)," released in 1995.

Three more albums have been released since then, "Warning," "Insomniac," and "American Idiot," which have sold over 10 million copies each.

Leigh's performance, which culminated in the film's best actress win at the British Academy Awards, has been described as "a tour de force.

The actress has also been nominated for an Emmy Award for her work on "The Americans."

Cantileva blends diversity into unique style

By Sonja Stephanian

Museo Latinum hispanicus in downtown Oakland is the latest venue to feature Cantileva, a new world music group. The band's unique sound combines Spanish flamenco guitar, American jazz, and Latin American percussion. The result is a fusion of traditional and contemporary styles that has won them a loyal following in the Bay Area.

"The more variety you have in a band, the better," says Patrick Grob, Cantileva band member.

The Latin jazz band Cantileva, under the artistic direction of Violinist/Jazz guitarist Nino Mateo, is comprised of McCallum students and two professional musicians. The band features an array of international instruments, including African drums, Spanish flamenco guitar, and American jazz elements. Grob adds, "We've tried to bring all the different cultures together in our music."

"We have an extensive history of music. We've played for 11 years and we've performed in high-profile venues," says teammate Robert Soltis, who is playing classical guitar for Cantileva. Soltis has contributed to several projects with established players and is based in the Philiphaugh Piano Company.

Since forming a category in 1988, Cantileva has performed at numerous venues, including the National Museum of American History and the Cotton Bowl. "The band has developed a unique voice which has enabled it to perform in a variety of locations," says Grob.

"The thing about our sound is that it's always changing," says Soltis. "We've been able to create an environment where there is no perfect arrangement."

Williams' "Take it Easy"

"I see no way to make it work," says theJgröße, "but the change isn't going to be easy."

Williams, who has been working on several projects over the last year, says, "I've been focusing on keeping the balance. "

But apparently Williams' lack of sincerity is well-intentioned. He says, "I'm really looking forward to getting to Know the students."

"This is the last film to care marker as usual. Who's understood and why I stay in the theater. They were all right about a lot..."

...and the most difficult part of her job. "I was the first to see it, and we had to be there. We had to be right here, right now."

She said, though, Leigh might have been right about this. "It feels like it's the right thing to do."

The movie, "Shine a Light," is now in theaters, and Leigh is excited for the opportunity to bring attention to the issue of sexual abuse in the church through her performance.

She also spoke about the challenges of playing a character who is struggling with addiction. "It's a challenge, but it's also a way to explore something that's really important."

Leigh has been open about her own struggles with substance abuse, and she uses her platform to raise awareness about the issue.

She hopes that her performance in "Shine a Light" will inspire others to seek help and support if they are struggling with addiction.

Leigh also discussed the importance of storytelling in films and how it can be a powerful tool for social change.

She said, "I feel like telling stories is really important. It's a way to connect with people and create empathy."

Leigh has been recognized for her work in the film industry, winning several awards for her performances. She hopes that her continued success will allow her to continue telling stories that are important to her.

Leigh also spoke about the importance of taking care of oneself and staying healthy, both physically and mentally.

She said, "I try to take care of myself as much as possible. I work hard, but I also make sure to take breaks and recharge."

Leigh is looking forward to what the future holds for her and hopes to continue working on projects that are meaningful to her.

The Princeton Review is the nation’s fastest growing LSAT course. And for good reason.

We keep our classes small (8 to 15 students) so you’re guaranteed plenty of personal attention. If there’s a concept that you don’t understand, our teachers will work with you until you do. And four actual LSAT practice exams given under real test-taking conditions will help get you ready for the real thing.

Despite its adverse effects, smoking's social appeal continues to draw many UCLA students

By Eric Ng

When the Marlboro Man appeared on billboards with cigarettes in hand, everyone thought it was cool. But when he died last year, some people didn't think it was such a great loss.

Today, accompanying the trend of alcohol and caffeine consumption, cigarette smoking is the preferred drug among many college students. Regardless of the harmful effects, for some smokers, the social aspect of smoking outweighs the cost.

A study from the American Cancer Society, one person dies from smoking every 10 seconds. If the current smoking trends persist, there will be one smoking-related death every three seconds by the time young smokers of today reach old age.

For some students, the smoking habit stems from peer pressure and early life habits. I used to see all the movies where the hero characters who had a cigarette in hand, but when something went wrong, they'd always smoke. But these are the signs that many students are taken with today. The movies are meant to influence the minds of smokers.

Media board restructuring elicits concern

by John Signacio

With the Communications Board numbers looking to change the board's structure to accommodate the new professional members, several board members represent the student body.

The proposal was made on March 6 at a meeting Wednesday night. Board members claimed that in order to better define the Communications Board's purpose within student media, its structure would reflect its goal.

The proposal would give the four remaining students veto power when voting in meetings, a move that some board members believe will keep students in power.

Undergraduate government investigates Judicial Board

Conflicting interest allegations may be resolved in new year

By Brooke Olson

Several members of a powerful undergraduate government board are under investigation for their personal and professional relationships with students, faculty, and others. The group is in the process of examining the ethical implications of the circumstances.

Justices are available to consider a range of issues, including personal and professional conflicts of interest, and they have been working with the group's members to ensure that the procedures are handled in the right way.

There is a need to reinforce the procedures and ensure that they are handled properly.

U.S. to surrender documents to Haiti

WASHINGTON — The United States has agreed to turn over to Haiti thousands of Haitian military documents that were seized last year in U.S. zone.

The transfer is conditioned on the Haitian government's agreement to the United States' request for Haitian assistance in the investigation of the 1994 massacre at Port-au-Prince.

Haitian officials have been seeking the documents, which are said to contain evidence of the massacre.

The transfer involves an agreement between the two nations, according to a Haitian official familiar with the negotiations. The agreement is expected to be announced on Friday.

The official said the documents will be turned over to the Haitian government on condition that they be used only for the investigation of the massacre at Port-au-Prince.

The massacre, which occurred on April 29, 1994, resulted in the deaths of hundreds of people, including women and children.

The massacre was committed by Haitian Army soldiers and paramilitary groups under the command of General Raoul Cédras, who is now in exile.

The United States, which has been a leading critic of Cédras, has been reluctant to turn over the documents.

However, the Haitian government has been persistent in its demand for the documents, saying they are necessary for the investigation of the massacre.

The agreement reached with the United States is expected to be announced on Friday.

Gay, lesbian group focuses on membership solidarity to boost public support, morale

By Patricia Mardanil

Standing to gain support from the gay, lesbian, and bisexual community, organizers of the Gay and Lesbian Association held a town meeting Tuesday.

"In the past the meeting was meant only to gain support for the Gay and Lesbian organizations," noted Ruthric Goff, a member of the organization. "It was always a small meeting, but this year we decided to bring in more people to see if we could attract more interest.

"The Gay and Lesbian Association is one that is trying to provide a social atmosphere for the community. It has been hosting events, such as the annual Gay Pride Parade, for several years."

"We are trying to reach out to the broader community and bring in more people," Goff said.

"There was a lot of discussion at the meeting about how to attract more people to the events. We talked about the need for more public relations and advertising."
Extra units jump-start university career

Students accumulate Advanced Placement credit, apply to major

By Phung Kim Tran

Hong Ho, a biological anthropology and premedical student, plans to graduate only three years after entering UCLA. While his in major or minor, he gets all his units from Advanced Placement (AP) exams. Ho also plans to get his advanced degrees in medicine.

Generally, students who take AP exams get a minimum of 70 percent on them, with a score of 5 on the Advanced Placement exam, which is typically the score necessary for the students to earn college credit.

Many students are getting a jump start on university requirements by taking Advanced Placement exams in high school. Advanced Placement exams are given to high school students to allow them to gain college credit.

Students who take AP exams in high school are eligible to take AP exams and have the option of earning college credit.

In recent years, the trend has shifted from rarely coming in with Advanced Placement units to rarely coming in without them. At UCLA, many come in too weak to take the class without fear of failing or losing their college status.

Most students take Advanced Placement units to save money. However, the cost of Advanced Placement units is much higher than the cost of AP exams.

Most students take AP exams in high school. Advanced Placement exams are given to high school students to allow them to gain college credit.

Currently, only 90% of AP students take AP exams for college credit. Therefore, many students take AP exams in high school as a way to get college credit.

In conclusion, Advanced Placement units can save students money and allow them to complete more college courses. However, students should consider taking AP exams in high school to get college credit.
Binge drinking strong among frat residents, study says

By William H. Rhea

The New York Times

Living in a fraternity or sorority house is by far the strongest indicator of binge drinking in college, a new study in the Harvard School of Public Health system.

Eighty-six percent of fraternity residents and 84 percent of sorority residents were binge drinkers, as were 70 percent of men and 51 percent of women. The study was conducted in 1993 by sending questionnaires to representatives of sample institutions of all levels in the United States that had fraternities and sororities.

Dr. Susan McHale, a social psychologist at the Harvard School of Public Health who is the principal investigator for the study, and her previous surveys have shown that 40 percent of all college students in the United States engage in binge drinking. The frequency of binge drinking by fraternity men and sorority women leads to an "Animal House" style of living," McHale said.

"The frequency of binge drinking by fraternity men and sorority women leads to an "Animal House" style of living," McHale said. "It should cause great concern and alarm among educators and parents of students who are affiliated with these groups."

"It is the study's finding that they're drinking too much," McHale said. "But the problem of fraternity and sorority drinking is not limited to this group of students."

While the study is still in progress, it has already found that 40 percent of all college students in the United States engage in binge drinking. The frequency of binge drinking by fraternity men and sorority women leads to an "Animal House" style of living," McHale said.

Temper's flare as strikebound French struggle to cope

By William J. Kane
The Associated Press

PARIS - About 450,000 workers from France's overcrowded rail system rallied Wednesday in the longest-lasting protest of the year, demanding injections of cash to keep the system from falling apart.

"It's a real shutdown. The work is still at a standstill," said Pierre Lasnier, a rail worker who joined thousands of other employees and their families at a protest in Paris. "We're doing everything we can to prevent any risk to the public."

The strike is among the first in a series of protests planned for Europe this week, as workers in Germany, Italy and Spain also prepare to vote on strikes.

Solders give light, peace to airfield

By Thomas Griesbaum

The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. (1995) — A New York City-based group flew a red, white, and blue hot air balloon Wednesday to start the first-ever peace mission for the U.S. peace movement, surviving in enemy territory and flying over a war zone.

The New York-based group, called The American Peace Mission, said it flew the balloon over the border between Turkey and Greece, just south of the town of Vlora, to symbolize the beginning of the mission.

The American Peace Mission, which was founded in 1989, is a group of five American protesters who have been flying balloons over war zones in an attempt to draw attention to the plight of the people living in those areas.

The group has flown balloons over Afghanistan, the Middle East, and North Korea, and has been arrested several times for flying over war zones.

The first flight of the peace mission on Wednesday was a success, with the balloon surviving in enemy territory and flying over a war zone.

The group plans to continue flying balloons over war zones in an attempt to draw attention to the plight of the people living in those areas.

Diplomats from New York’s Department of Mental Health and Alcoholism were disappointed by the recent decision of the New York State Board of Regents to revoke the license of a large hospital that had been providing services to the mentally ill for years. The Board’s action was taken after receiving a report from the Department of Mental Health and Alcoholism that the hospital was not complying with state regulations.

The decision was made following an investigation by the Department’s Office of Investigation and Assessment, which found that the hospital was failing to provide adequate treatment for patients with serious mental illness. The hospital had been cited for these deficiencies several times in recent years, but had not made the necessary improvements.

The Department of Mental Health and Alcoholism has expressed concern about the impact of the decision on patients and their families. The agency has promised to work with the hospital and other stakeholders to ensure that patients continue to receive the care they need.

In a statement, the agency said: “We are deeply saddened by the decision of the Board of Regents. The hospital has provided critical services to the mentally ill for decades, and we are concerned about the impact of this decision on patients and their families. We will work with the hospital and other stakeholders to ensure that patients continue to receive the care they need.”

Band innovates with computerized sounds for metal

By John Sabatini

Just when it looked as though metal was about to permanently disappear from the airwaves, a new band called God Lives has emerged to challenge the supposed dominance of the genre. Though God Lives is a new band on the scene, it has already made a significant impact with its unique approach to Metal music.

God Lives uses computerized sounds to create a new soundscape for Metal. Instead of relying on traditional instruments, God Lives' music is generated through a computer program, allowing for a wide range of sounds and textures. This innovative approach has earned the band critical acclaim and a dedicated following.

The band's lead guitarist, Michael Eves, credits the use of technology for allowing them to create sounds that are both powerful and unique. "We use computer programs to generate music that is impossible to create with traditional instruments," he says. "It's a whole new world and we're excited to be a part of it."

God Lives' music has been described as "extremely powerful and superb," with performances that are "provocative and profound." The band's first album, "Extremely Powerful," was released last month and has received critical acclaim for its innovative use of computerized sounds.

The success of God Lives has not gone unnoticed by the Metal community. "I think it's great to see a new band like this making a difference," says Metal fan Tom White. "They're doing something different and I think it's going to make a big impact on the scene."

God Lives continues to innovate and push the boundaries of Metal music, using technology to create a new soundscape that is both powerful and unique. With each new release, the band continues to gain a dedicated following and prove that Metal is not dead, but rather evolving into new and exciting forms.

Golly gee, this year has a number of maddeningly obscure names, such as “Thornapple,” “Sunrise” and “Sunset,” but I am not able to see which of these is the trouble of the moment.

We are pleased to announce that Saturday, April 17, 1993, at 8 p.m., the School of Music will present a concert of contemporary music.

A large group of students will take part in the performance, and there will be a small number of professional musicians as well.

The concert will feature works by a variety of composers, including pieces by John Cage, Philip Glass, and Milton Babbitt.

This is an excellent opportunity to hear music that is not often heard, and to see how different composers approach the problem of creating new music.

is something that everyone should do.
Along with the musical and vocal training given on campus at the Student Chorale, students are often interested in finding opportunities to perform out-of-school. However, these opportunities can be limited. Therefore, the University Chorale was formed in 1990 to provide students with an additional outlet for their musical talents.

The University Chorale consists of students from all majors and schools, and members are selected through an audition process.

The group performs a variety of repertoire, including works by composers such as Brahms, Mozart, Handel, and Bach. Performances include concerts, organ recitals, and chamber music performances.

The University Chorale
also has the opportunity to perform for various community events, such as weddings, funerals, and private parties.

performances, the University Chorale participates in service projects and community outreach activities.

Whether you are a musician or an enthusiast, the University Chorale
 offers an opportunity to contribute to the community through music.

The University Chorale
 is open to all students, and auditions are held regularly.

THE first time I'd ever performed as themain attraction at the center of thespectators' attention was at age 14. Whilethe two were 75-year-old high schoolclassmates, the total was nearly tripled whenthe age disparity was factored in. As Kellyremembered, "Our teacher, who washerself a retired schoolteacher, hadbrought her husband and some familymembers to listen. They were allcrazed with excitement. He wasgiddy. It was amazing."

Kelly's voice cracked throughout thepiece, and herCONCERT.jpginterviewer seemed to be enjoying theexperience. Kelly's eyes shone withexcitement as she reminisced aboutthat night. She had written about it in ajournal, and was clearly proud of theaccomplishment.

And while such success stories may beisolated, the band's application ofthis knowledge to their music hasgrown. Whenever the band plays live, theytake care to ensure that everyone isdropping into a rhythm thatmatches the music. They also make surethat the audience is aware of whatthey're about to hear.

"We just did that on our tour and everyonewas ready for it," Kelly explained. "It wasone of the best shows of the tour, and wehad a great time playing it." Theconcert was held in a historicchurch, and the band's performancewas met with enthusiasticapplause from the attendees.

The band's dedication to their craft is nosecret, and has earned them adevoted following of fans across thecountry. With each new album, theycontinue to push the boundaries oftheir sound, experimenting withnovel styles and techniques. Theyremain committed to providing aunique and engaging experience fortheir audiences, and are constantlylooking for ways to improve andgrow as musicians.

Kelly's passion for music is evident in herevery move, and her talent is matchedonly by her enthusiasm. She is a truemaster of her craft, and her dedicationto her art is inspirational to those whowatch her perform. Her music istruly timeless, and will continue toinspire listeners for years to come.

Kelly, who has been performing forover 20 years, is a two-timeGrammy winner and a formermember of the band's parent company.She is also the lead singer for theband's newest project, a side projectthat showcases her vocal talents in anew light. The band's newest album, "EpicStories," is set to release this fall, andis already generating excitementamong fans and critics alike.

Kelly's dedication to her craft is evidentin every aspect of her music, fromsongwriting to live performance. She isa true artist, and her music is atestament to her passion and talent.

Haslrig of N.Y. Jet fame faces trouble with drugs, law

By Barry Wilner

The Associated Press

HESSEY, N.Y. — For many months, John Haslrig was a model citizen with the New York Jets. Then he disappeared.

The troubled Haslrig hasn't been seen in more than a week, the team said Saturday. He has missed several days of practice and failed to show up for a match Friday night.

Haslrig, 26, has never been suspended by coach Walt Michaels.

"It's just dropped off the face of the earth," said James Eckel, Haslrig's attorney. "We haven't heard from him. We assume he's at home, but we don't know."

Haslrig's family has been in touch with the team. They're not sure, but they believe Haslrig is safe.

The team said Haslrig was last seen in the locker room late Friday.

"I'm just worried," Haslrig's mother said. "He's an easy kid."

Haslrig, a former All-Pro guard for the Jets, was released from prison earlier this month.

The NFL is investigating the latest incident involving the 300-pounder.

Haslrig, who is on his fourth team, has been suspended three times in his career.

"I'm surprised. The guy's been quiet. He's been good around here," team spokesman Paul Rickken said."

Haslrig was suspended for breaking team rules and for not attending practice.

"It's a very tough time for our team," Rickken said. "We're all worried about his safety."

Blocker Krull climbing to top of volleyball ladder

Junior has lofty game to another level, while taking a few falls along the way

By Robin Guttman
Daily Bruin Staff

When UCLA middle blocker Kim Krull isn't making opposing teams hit their hands and wrists with her powerful spikes and(array of feints), she's "going the other way":
spiking during games. Krull waves a middle finger to the naysayers, who have called her a "goatee" with the requisite number of months.

"I know I'm a lot smaller than a lot of people, but I don't really notice it when I'm out there," Krull said. "When I'm on the court, it's like I'm 6'5." Krull added, "I'm just trying to outplay them, and it's working so far." When asked if she had any plans to add spikes to her repertoire, Krull replied, "Not yet." As for her future plans, Krull said, "I'm thinking about going into coaching, maybe at the junior college level." "I've always been interested in coaching," Krull continued. "I've been around coaches my whole life, and I love the competitive aspect of it." When asked if she had any advice for young players, Krull said, "Just keep working hard and don't give up. If you want to be good, you have to be willing to put in the time." Krull's dedication to her craft is evident in her performances, and she continues to impress with her height and competitive spirit.

UCLA, coaches and teammates were. "This is a product of all the hard work Kim's done," said Coach Marshaavn Jones. "She's a true competitor, and I'm proud of her." Krull's contributions to the team have been noted by her peers as well. "Kim is a great teammate," said outside hitter Chelsea Wilkins. "She's always pushing me to be better, and it's paid off." When asked if she had any advice for young players, Wilkins said, "Just keep working hard and don't give up. If you want to be good, you have to be willing to put in the time." Krull's dedication to her craft is evident in her performances, and she continues to impress with her height and competitive spirit.

"Gary Pojman, a middle blocker from Michigan, played on the same team as me in college. He's a lot bigger than me, but he still managed to find a way to make an impact. I think that's what makes Kim special. She's not the tallest person on the court, but she's always willing to go out on a limb to make something happen. It's what makes her such a valuable player for us," said Wilkins.

Krull's success on the court is a matter of consistency. When asked how she stays focused, Krull said, "I just try to be positive and approach every game with the same mindset. If I have a bad game, I try to learn from it and move on." Krull's dedication to her craft is evident in her performances, and she continues to impress with her height and competitive spirit.

Everyone's counting on Jenny Johnson, an All-Pac-10 selection, to keep UCLA volleyball in the mix. Johnson is a senior outside hitter who has been a key player for the Bruins for four years. Johnson has been named to the All-Pac-10 team three times and was named the conference's co-Player of the Year in 2010. When asked if she had any advice for young players, Johnson said, "Just keep working hard and don't give up. If you want to be good, you have to be willing to put in the time." UCLA strikes gold against Long Beach

By Emmanuel Sefieda

The Bruins hope to keep good things going in the Pac-10.

They're 1-0 over the weekend, having defeated Arizona State on Saturday and now they have a huge matchup against Southern California on Sunday. UCLA has been on a roll, winning their last three games, including a 10-point victory over Oregon State last week. They are currently ranked fourth in the conference.

The Bruins are led by senior forward Tyler Honeycutt, who is averaging 19.5 points per game. They also have a strong defense, allowing only 64.5 points per game. UCLA is currently leading the Pac-10 in scoring defense.

For Southern California, they are also off to a good start, winning their last two games. They are led by senior guard D'Angelo Russell, who is averaging 20.5 points per game. USC is currently leading the Pac-10 in scoring.

The game is expected to be a close contest, with UCLA having the slight edge in experience and depth. Both teams are looking to maintain their winning streaks as they head into the next round of conference play.

> Classic opens with first-ever meeting of Villanova, Purdue

By Scott Yamaguchi

daily Bruin Staff

Before the UCLA men's basketball team takes the court against Maryland Saturday, the Bruins will have to sit patiently while Purdue battles Villanova in the first game of the second annual John Wooden Classic at The Pond in Anaheim.

The Purdue-Villanova contest, televised by ABC, is scheduled to start at 8:00 p.m. — two-and-a-half hours before the UCLA-Maryland matchup.

Villanova, which won the Maui Invitational two weeks ago with wins over Wisconsin, Santa Clara and North Carolina, is 6-0 and ranked third in the nation.

But the Wildcats have not exactly cruised through the early season. Two of their victories — over North Carolina in the championship game of the Maui Invitational and over Miami in a Big East Conference game Tuesday night — have been decided by just two points.

The Miami win, which brought Villanova's conference record to 2-0, required a last-second layup by senior guard Kerry Kittles.

Kittles, a national Player of the Year candidate, has been a consistent force this season; averaging 28.5 points and 8.4 rebounds per game. He had 26 points against Miami, and stepped up with a season-high 28 points in an 83-68 win over St. John's Dec. 1.

The Wildcats were forced to play that game without starting post players Jason Lawson and Chuck Konekoy, both of whom were serving one-game suspensions for fighting in a 70-63 victory over Bradley.

Purdue, meanwhile, was 3-1 entering a nonconference game against Oklahoma Wednesday night, results of which were not available at press time.

The Boilermakers, whose tallest starter stands 6-feet-8-inches, have yet to be outplayed.

Is head football coach Terry Donahue looking into the situation?

By Eric Branch

Daily Bruin Staff

You could cut the pre-game tension with a knife. Christmas in Honolulu wouldn't be complete without the choral singing for an audience college football game. In fact, it's a little like holding a presidential debate under a tree.

Not this year. However, on Dec. 25, No. 11 Kansas (13-1) and unranked UCLA (11-4) will trade the microphones for shoulder pads and square off in the Aloha Bowl. But don't expect KU head coach Glen Mason to spend his holiday season in a film room.

"I'm one of those guys who probably watch a lot of football. I'd be different if we were playing for the national championship. Not that it would be different, what difference does it make," Mason said. "That's the way I approached the last one and that's the way I'll treat this one. I've been to a lot of bowl games, but there's no place like the Rose Bowl."
